ENGLISH ATHLETES WIN MEET

LONDON, Eng., July 11.—The combined athletic teams of Harvard and Yale went down to defeat before Oxford and Cambridge on the Queen's Club athletic field this afternoon. The English athletes won five firsts against four for their Yankee cousins.

The defeat of the American team was due to the failure of Jaques, Lawless and Withington, the Yankee long distance runners, to make good. Before the meet started Jaques was picked an easy winner in the half-mile run, but he was beaten out by his team mate, Preble. In the mile run all the American milers were completely outclassed by the British runners.

Yankees Lose Long Runs.

Again in the two-mile race the American runner, Withington, fell down flat, being beaten out by Taylor and Potter of Oxford.

In the 440-yard dash Kelley of Harvard was no match for Taylor of Oxford. Kelley was a big favorite in the event, as he has covered the quarter-mile in 50 seconds flat.

Everything pointed toward an American victory until the long runs arrived. And then the Yankee supporters could see victory slipping from their grasp as the Britons appeared to be in a class by themselves.

The American team won first place in the 120-yard hurdles, half-mile run, broad jump and the 880-yard run. In all these events they completely outclassed their British cousins.

The Englishmen won first place in the hammer throw, 100-yard dash, and in the mile and 2-mile runs.

American Boy British Hero.

Though victorious, the Englishmen owe their victory to the prowess of Putnam, an American Rhodes Scholarship winner. Putnam is a native of Kansas City. By winning first place in the hammer throw he made it possible for England to win five firsts, which gave them the meet.

Bresnahan and His Plucky Crew of Cardinals, Heroes of the Wreck

SURVIVORS TELL OF HORRORS OF WRECK

A special train arrived at the South Station, this city, at 12:10 p. m., bringing the survivors of the Bridgeport wreck. Many of them told thrilling stories of the disaster.

BROKE WINDOW TO ESCAPE FROM CAR.

Commander L. B. de Steiguer of Washington, said:

"I have been in several train wrecks, but this is the worst in my experience. This morning's disaster was the most terrible I ever witnessed.

"My wife and I were in car H when we were awakened by the crash. It was very dark. When the lights were lit we could see that the car we were in had been bulged in the middle. The roof had been raised clear upwards. I tried to get out but the doors were locked or jammed in such a way that we could not get out at all. For forty minutes we remained in ignorance of the real situation.

"We finally made our exit by forcing a window. We smashed it with a suit case. Our car was one of those that did not leave the rails. The coach ahead of us was hanging over the trestle.

"The shrieks of the injured and dying were awful to hear. The time we were confined in our car was like an inferno. From all sides we could distinguish the cries of those who had been hurt. It was a terrible experience all the way through.

"No one was injured in our car. We were all badly shaken up, however, and were all thankful to get out alive."

As Ball Player Saw It.

Lou Evans, right fielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, said:

"Well, they almost got us, but not quite. Let me tell you, I don't want to go through another thing like that. I think two doses of it would finish me.

"Hurt? No, we weren't hurt physically, but there are other kinds of hurts. It didn't do me a bit of good to stand there and listen to the screams of those women and children, and men, too, to see the dying struggling to get out from under the wreckage, when there was absolutely no chance for them to live, to look at the mothers dashing madly from one spot to another in search of their babies. For there were a lot of babies on that train.

"Thirteen dead? You can bet they will find more than that number when the wreckers finish their work. I saw that many myself, and I also caught glimpses of bodies pinned under the cars. I know there was no life left in them.

"We did all we could, but I'm afraid it wasn't much. It was pitch dark when the jar and crash awoke us. I don't think we realized at first that it was a real wreck. We are so accustomed to be jolted around at night that we don't notice such things any more. But we weren't kept in ignorance very long. Right after the first crash we could hear screams such as I never want to hear again. Then we heard Bresnahan calling through the car: 'Get up boys. The train's gone all to smash and there's plenty of work for us.'

"Some of the boys were already up; in fact, they had been jarred right out of their berths. Some of us put on trousers and shoes, but the rest went right out barefooted and in their nightclothes. Roger was right—there was plenty to do. We couldn't make much progress at first, because it was so dark. The car that had been next to the engine, the baggage car I think it was, caught fire and enabled us to see for the first time the extent of the disaster. It was a terrible sight. Everywhere there were women and children and everyone of them was panic-stricken. The roar of the flames, the screams of the wounded, dying and merely frightened passengers, the shouts of the firemen and the volunteer rescuers, were all mixed up in one deafening noise.

"We procured axes from our cars and

BOSTON-BOUND TRAIN JUMPS OFF TRESTLE

Thirteen persons are known to be dead and forty-five severely injured, many of whom are expected to die, and fifty or more others were slightly hurt and shaken up when the Boston-bou Federal Express train leaped from a 25-foot viaduct at Brid port, Ct., at 3:30 a. m. to-day, the locomotive and six cars plun ing to the street in a great heap of death wreckage.

A train carrying many of the survivors of the wreck reached the South Station at 12:17 o'clock. Many of the New Haven railroad officials were on hand to take care of those who had passed through the strenuous experience. The platforms were crowded.

When the passengers got off the train it was noticed that some of them showed marks of the wreck. Some had their hands and wrists bandaged. The clothing of others was torn. One or two of the women were hysterical. Their hats were awry and their hair somewhat disarranged. None of them needed medical attendance and they continued their journeys.

It was one of the most tragic wrecks in the history of New England railroading. Many pitiful scenes followed the crash.

The engineer and fireman and eleven passengers were killed instantly. Of the dead and injured passengers a few of the latter were from Boston and vicinity, but most of the victims were from the Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington regions.

The members of the St. Louis National League baseball team, on their way to Boston to play to-day, had a narrow escape with their lives. They were in the last of the nine cars that made up the train, and their car did not leave the track. The ball players did heroic service in rescue work.

Railroad Blames Engineer for Wreck

An official statement issued by the New Haven Railroad at New Haven blamed A. M. Curtis, the engineer, for the wreck. The statement said that the train was dashing along at sixty miles an hour and failed to take a switch when crossing from one track to another. The train should have been going at a speed not higher than fifteen miles an hour.

The train was an hour behind and it is supposed that the engineer was trying to make up this lost time. If it was his fault, he paid for it with his life. The engineer made a wild leap from the cab before the locomotive shot from the viaduct. His body hit the track and he was ground to pieces beneath the huge iron wheels of the engine.

The fireman, W. A. Ryan, stuck to the engine and his crushed body was dug out from the great heap of debris that littered the street from curb to curb.

A situation that brought tears to the eyes of the rescuers presented itself when they had delved into the mass of wood and iron that had been the day coach.

ATWOOD FLIES TO WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, July 11.—Aviator Harry Atwood has arrived in Washington, but the last six miles of his journey from Boston were made in an automobile from College Park, where he landed with his aeroplane at 6:10 a. m. to-day.

The young aviator, carrying Charles K. Hamilton as a passenger in the latter's Burgess-Wright biplane, left Stemmer's Run, Md., at 4:40 a. m. to-day and descended at College Park an hour and a half later, having covered the forty miles in slow time.

This afternoon, if good weather prevails, Atwood will crown his achievements by flying the remaining six miles of his 570-mile journey, circling the Washington monument and landing here. Immediately after arriving at College park, the aviators left the machine in the aerial training ground in charge of several enlisted men and came to the city to seek a landing place on the monument ground.

"Our trip to-day was a pleasure the entire distance," said Atwood on landing. "We skimmed past Baltimore, swung over Fort McHenry and planned to follow the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, but mistook the Pennsylvania lines for our route and came near missing College park altogether.

"We discovered the mistake in time and flew across several miles of heavy forest before we reached the government hangars.

"Our start could not have been better despite the fact we were in a field quite rough. The machine took the air gracefully, and soon reached a height of 1,500 feet. We had no trouble with the machine or motor and could have readily gone to Washington had we desired. Our biplane is in perfect condition, and when our tank is filled we will be ready on a moment's notice to complete the journey.

"Before sundown we will circle the Washington monument and land on the famous Potomac Park. I shall then return to College Park and assist in developing aeronautics in a military sense."

ITALIAN LINERS TO MAKE BOSTON CALL

It has become known that because of the cancellation of the sailing of the Romanic of the White Star line for the Mediterranean in July, several Italian lines will send steamers from New York to Boston to pick up easy money. The first will be the San Giovanni, and when she sails from here next Saturday she will carry almost 1,000 third class passengers, for the extreme heat has made many natives of Naples and Genoa eager to get away to the old country at any cost. The Principe di Piemonte will leave Boston July 29 and she will also take away a shipload. It is said early in August the new liner Martha Washington will make a call here.

SENATE "TALK" NATION'S PERIL

BY JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The Cummins amendments to the reciprocity bill are voted down. So are the Simmons "Me too's." And we are several more hot days' journeying toward the end.

Meanwhile there is growing out of the events of this laggard session a new foe of privileges and customs which the American people are raising themselves to fight.

It is the antiquated customs and precedents of the American Senate which are being daily used and abused at the cost of the people's money, their time and their interests.

The fight began in the AMERICAN, which has hammered unceasingly since the opening week upon the abuses of senatorial courtesy and unlimited debate.

For a long time it waged this battle alone. It is now impressed upon the people and newspapers throughout the country.

Protest Is Widespread.

And the protest is widespread. Three New York newspapers yesterday fired editorial protests against the Senators who were "wasting the time and money of the people in selfish or partisan exploitation." There are the Cummins amendments. What good did they do? What good were they expected to do except to Cummins and his political prestige in the West? Why has little Simmons of North Carolina been permitted to consume two other days in going over exactly the same grounds that Cummins covered? Just for the edification of the Simmons following in the Pine Tar State.

Here, in the sweltering face of this revived and malignant heat wave, comes La Follette of Wisconsin, with the announcement that he wishes to consume three whole days in a speech on reciprocity. What for? Who is going to read it? Who is going to be persuaded by it? What good is the country going to get out of it? Nobody, nothing.

La Follette to Talk Three Days.

Yet this great, steaming country must hold its breath and sit still and spend its taxes while Robert La Follette piles up a small pyramid of volumes upon his senatorial desk and talks for three days, filling a solid volume of anti-reciprocity stuff, which at the expense of the government under the name and frank of the Senator from Wisconsin will go out to the supposed furtherance of his personal political ends and rapidly diminishing presidential prestige.

Where does the country come in on this program? It is not exactly visible upon the horizon. But the senatorial courtesy and unlimited debate which permits one man to consume three sweltering days of a nation's life with a self-exploitation which he himself knows has not the faintest chance of success in legislation is moving recklessly to a point where a popular revolution is certain to bring "cloture rule" to unlimited debate, and to demand a sharp differentiation between the "courtesy" shown to an individual Senator and the greater courtesy manifested in due consideration to the time, money and welfare of a great people.

Courtesy to Country.

The reform of the Senate is to be a shibboleth of the next campaign growing out of this laggard Senate of the extra session, which took seven weeks to get ready to do anything, while the House was at work in seven days, and has loitered and laggarded and filibustered and "fought by indirection" since the session began.

Meanwhile let us commend the reciprocity senators. Those who have deemed it necessary to speak at all have made short speeches that went to the point and finished in an hour or more.

The insurgents have literally talked themselves to death. They are not far from being a moribund party. Insincerity, inconsistency and selfish loquacity have pretty nearly ended the promising insurgent movement.

BALL PLAYERS HEROES OF TRAIN WRECK

Roger Bresnahan and Browns Aid Victims of Crash at Bridgeport To-day.

Mrs. Woodruff and baby, train wreck survivors.

Seldom has the value of discipline been exhibited as powerfully as was shown in the case of the St. Louis ball players who proved themselves heroes of the Bridgeport train wreck.

Accustomed to routine and the faithful execution of all orders issued by a leader, the ball players rallied promptly at the call of Manager Roger Bresnahan, and in ready response to his directions attacked the rescue work with results that instantly bore returns.

By the way, the facts that the ball club was uninjured and thus in a position to tender aid to the suffering victims is due to one of those whimsical pranks of luck which may afford pleasing food to the Fatalists.

Was a Lucky Blunder.

A mistake, just a common ordinary blunder by a railroad brakeman in reassembling the train after it had been ferried around Manhattan Island to the Boston tracks after leaving the Jersey City station, alone saved the lives of the leaguers and left them able to give assistance to the sufferers.

When the St. Louis team left Philadelphia last night the members were distributed in two coaches near the centre of the train. When the train was made up again in New York to continue the journey to Boston, the ball players' coaches were by chance hooked up as the very last ones of the train. Fate, maybe; call it what you will. If the train had been reassembled in the order in which it left Washington and Philadelphia, the cars containing the Cardinals would have gone over the trestle.

According to despatches from Bridgeport, the sturdy Roger Bresnahan—the same fellow who introduced into the National League the use of cricket shin guards for catchers—jumped to a quick realization of what had happened and how it had happened. The ready brain, trained to grasp the lightning situations of a baseball game, would naturally do such a thing.

The big, husky leader called to his men. Already they had been tumbled out of their berths by shock. Clad only in pajamas, and with not even slippers to protect their bare feet from the rough ground, the athletes turned out of the coaches, and stood for a moment on the trestle. Below was the mass of wreckage, some of it already in flames.

"Never mind trying to find your clothes, boys," called out Bresnahan, whose voice was more easily recognized in the morning twilight than his burly form; "climb down and we'll see if we can give 'em any help."

Bresnahan led the way back upon the trestle, and, standing where the structure touched the ground, checked off his players as they passed, and made sure that no one was injured.

The players swarmed around the wreckage, each working independently of the other wherever he saw an opportunity to do good, but all as calm and as bent upon results as if it had been a ninth inning finish in a World's Championship series.

Mrs. Helen Robison Britton of Cleveland, the owner of the Cardinals—the only woman owner, too, of any baseball club in the country—must feel proud of the work the players accomplished.

Little Miller Huggins, the sawed-off shortstop of the Cardinals, was one of the first to plunge into the wreckage. It was Huggins who helped to pull from under the debris the first injured man. The two Laudermilk brothers found a stretcher when the first ambulance arrived at the scene, and aided, under the direction of a surgeon, in removing the injured back to the ambulances.

Mike Mowrey wielded an axe vigorously, cutting through the staunch panels of one coach, thus making an opening through which a number of passengers crawled to safety. Koney, Evans, Ellis and Salee, the tall, lanky pitcher, worked like firemen among the pile of splintered timbers, sometimes calling to a surgeon where a victim was too seriously hurt to be touched by unskilled hands, and sometimes bearing a hand themselves to help a trainman to reduce a tangle of scrap iron and planks to make way for the hospital corps.

Wallace Smith heard the crys of a baby as he passed one overturned coach. He picked his way through the crushed door at one end. There he found not one but two infants. They were too near suffocation to cry much, but they were unhurt. Careful inspection by doctors revealed that the pair of unfortunate little tourists had not even been scratched.

These are only a few of the specific acts of rescue performed by the Cardinals. Every man on the team did his share and did it nobly.

ST. LOUIS BALL TEAM, WRECK HEROES, ARRIVE IN BOSTON

The bruised and battered St. Louis Cardinals, who were lucky to escape with their lives from the Federal Express wreck, arrived in Boston at noon to-day. They got off their train at Back Bay station and hurried to the Copley Square Hotel, where they were quickly assigned to rooms. Sleep was what they wanted most, but it was doubtful whether they would be able to get that sort of relief after the horrors they had gone through.

One look at the faces of Bresnahan and his men was enough to tell the observer that they had been in some sort of disaster. The Cardinals were the real heroes of the wreck. Hurrying out of their cars, half dressed, the minute the alarm was given they had worked steadily at the noble task of life saving from the early hours of the morning until there was no more for them to do. They were led in their volunteer rescue work by their brave manager, Roger Bresnahan. The latter's face was scorched and smoke begrimed and his clothes were a sight. Some of the others were badly marked up by burns and smoke, but Roger showed more of the signs of his arduous labors than anyone else.

They were all exceedingly grateful that their lives had been spared, but their minds were shaken by the awful sights which they could not escape seeing and the sounds—screams of frantic women and children and dying men—which were still ringing in their ears.

"Yes, we were lucky," said Bresnahan, "but we won't get over that experience for a while. I can stand a lot, but the groans and screams of those mothers and babies was too much for me."

The players' trunks were in the baggage coach, and most of them were probably destroyed. Their hand-grips and the bags containing their uniforms were with them in the sleeper and were unharmed. They had costumes in which to play ball this afternoon, but were grateful to Manager Tenney for calling off the game, for they didn't feel a bit like playing with so many horrors on their minds.

"Where shall we eat?" said Forbes to Brown. "That's easy," said Brown. "Let's strike for the green hedges of the Venetian Room at the New American House." "I'm with you," said Forbes.

AFTER THE GRIP

If You Do Not Recover Your Usual Health Try This Treatment.

For three years after an attack of the grip Mrs. C. B. Pierce, of South Britain, Conn., was in poor health and found no relief until she built up her blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says:

"I attribute my sickness directly to an attack of the grip. I had fainting spells, which came on me without warning. I would faint away while sitting in a chair or lying in bed. After recovering from them I would be deathly sick for a week or so. I became so much worse that I began to have two or three fainting spells a day. These spells so weakened me that I had scarcely enough strength to get around. My limbs would become swollen especially at night. My sleep was broken for I was extremely nervous and apprehensive of some impending danger. I had severe headaches most of the time and a darting pain over my left eye which affected the whole side of my head. I was troubled with neuralgic pains around my heart and was frequently confined to my bed.

"During two years of my sickness I was treated at different times by three doctors. Their treatment did not afford me relief so I decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. A few boxes of the pills gave me much benefit. My headaches became less severe and I began to feel better in every way. I gave the pills a good trial and was completely cured. I am in good health now and praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they undoubtedly saved me from years of suffering."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have also cured anemia, chlorosis, general debility, rheumatism and after-effects of fevers and should be given a trial wherever a tonic for the blood and nerves is needed.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are always the same and are sold only in packages bearing the well-known trade-mark and are guaranteed by the manufacturers to contain no opiate, narcotic or anything that could injure the most delicate system.

The genuine are sold by all druggists or will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y. A valuable booklet, "Diseases of the Blood," containing fuller information will be sent free upon request.

What Automobiles Have Done

The automobile picks up and the wind carries every variety and species of disease germ that lurks on the streets and roads, and these germs settle on people's heads. A daily washing of the head with ordinary soap would result disastrously, because soap removes the oily matter that is so essential to hair health. Automobilists, as well as those who are obliged to pass through the dust that automobiles stir up, should clean the hair and scalp with Birt's Head Wash, the antiseptic shampoo.

It is made of a refined creamy soap body, combined with glycerin, white of eggs, cochin cocoanut oil and salicylic acid. The glycerin is soothing and healing; the white of eggs helps to make a fine emulsion; the salicylic acid is an antiseptic and prevents unpleasant odors, while the cocoanut oil is free and replaces the natural oily substance that the soap removes. Birt's Head Wash makes the hair and scalp delightfully clean, and opens up the pores leading to the hair roots. You will never know the satisfaction that accompanies a perfect shampoo until you use Birt's Head Wash.

It is as different from ordinary shampoos as night is from day. It leaves the scalp in just that condition most encouraging to the growth of beautiful hair. Sold in hygienic tubes at 25c., at drug and department stores.

WRECK STORY TOLD BY PASSENGERS WHO ESCAPE WITH LIVES

started in to clear away the woodwork that was pinning down some of the poor victims. It wasn't a hard task near the baggage car, which was furnishing brilliant light, but it was fierce around the other cars, because we had to be so careful not to strike any of the bodies with our axes. And then we didn't feel much like working with those pitiful sights all around us.

"I don't know whether we did any good or not. Wallie Smith picked up a couple of babies who were lying all alone under a car. He tried to find their mothers, but couldn't. The firemen and volunteer workers from Bridgeport arrived pretty soon and helped us. It was easier when the dawn began to break, but I thought the sunlight was never coming.

"We worked steadily from the time the wreck occurred until we left on the train for Boston. Naturally we don't feel like playing ball to-day and we're glad to have a lay-off. But we won't enjoy it as much as we would if we didn't have all those horrors to think of.

"Our uniforms were right in the sleeper with us. This was a big, new steel car and wasn't hurt a bit. I'm afraid our trunks, containing some of our street clothes, are all smashed to pieces. But I'll be willing to give them up if they don't find more than thirteen dead."

Women Proved Cool.

F. Arthur Snyder of Erie, Pa., delegate to the Bakers and Confectioners' convention in Boston, said:

"I was asleep in the last upper berth of the car in which I was riding and was awakened suddenly by three indescribable roars somewhat similar to a peal of thunder. Next I was precipitated out of my bunk, thrown back again, knocked against the ceiling and swung like a pendulum on a clock after I caught hold of the framework of the bed. Then I realized what had happened. I was in a wreck.

"As I was about getting my bearings, the car kind of poised on the embankment and toppled over. The scene which followed amng the passengers—and they were panic-stricken—beggars description. It was the women showed the greatest coolness. The men seemed to have lost their heads. Thy fought like madmen to get out. It was then that I looked at my watch and found that it was just 3:30 a. m. to the minute.

"Ghastly was the sight which met my eyes when I succeeded in getting out of the car by one of the doors. There lay the slain and injured on the embankment, with kind-hearted men and women ministering to their wants. The moans of the dying were pitiful in the extreme.

"I rendered what assistance I could in hauling out the wounded from some of the cars. The women, God bless them, deserve great praise for what they did in the face of trying circumstances. My clothes are a wreck. I was badly shaken up, but managed to arrive here to attend the convention."

Heard Tremendous Racket.

Anna Hiss, aged seventeen, of Baltimore, said:

"The first thing I knew I was awakened by a falling sensation, but before I was fully awake, I heard a horrible crash, and was thrown violently against the upper part of my berth, and then as the car seemed to turn over I rolled out into the aisle. I was horribly frightened, and as it was horribly dark, and there was a tremendous racket I could hardly collect my senses. I heard women shrieking, and above all there was a terrible grinding and hissing.

Then I heard my sister asking what had happened and I felt reassured, and then my aunt told us she was all right too. It took us an awfully long while to get out, because for some reason or other it was hard to get at the windows. The men were climbing through the berths and breaking open the screens. A lot of windows must have been broken with the fall, but we continued to hear the crash of glass every minute, as some one was breaking a window in his attempts to get out."

Hurried to Get Out.

A. G. Haines of Lynn said:

"I was shaken up and pretty badly scared for a minute. The first thing I knew I was right out in the aisle with what seemed like a million people on top of me. I know there was no one under me, but about everybody that could possibly have fallen on top of me seemed to have done it. No one in our car seems to have been badly injured except one woman, who had both her legs broken above the knees.

"I don't believe there was anybody in the car that didn't get a bump of some sort. A lot of us were cut trying to get out. We didn't have anything but our hands, or at least we didn't think to use anything else, and it was pitch dark; the one thing we wanted to do was to get out and get out quick."

Took Out 16 Women.

William Butler, No. 214 West Sixty-third street, New York, a Pullman car employe, said:

"It was a horrible wreck. The train must have been going at least sixty miles an hour when the crash came. I heard the crash and jumped. I came from Philadelphia in the same sleeper that I went out in from Boston. My car was not injured."

Mrs. Thomas Smith of Philadelphia said:

"I was in the last sleeper and I am nervous. I can't describe the scene at the wreck. It was a pitiable sight. I wasn't asleep. I didn't hear and cries when the crash came and got up."

Clarence E. Davidson of Westdale, Mass., said:

"I think my back is sprained and I am going to consult a doctor. I am so unstrung I can't talk. I was in the third car from the engine and when I got out from the wreckage I saw people rolling down the aisles of the car. The Rev. Mr. Mitchell of Providence, C. B. Hays and myself worked like mad to get sixteen women from out of the wreckage. I don't know who they were. Mr. Hays's sleeper tipped over, so that his berth was in the air.

Lieutenant E. A. Osterman, United States aMrine Corps, and bound for the Charlestown Navy Yard, said:

"I was in the next to the last car on the train, and it was not derailed. I was shaken up some."

Callahan & Morrissy Anniversary

One Year Ago This Month We Sold the Callahan & Morrissy

Entire Stock at Less Than ½ Price

On Monday our Anniversary of the C. & M. Sale beat the record made by the original sale one years ago. We have provided a stock of high grade merchandise so big, and fresh, and seasonable, that Monday's crowd can be repeated tomorrow. Never in the history of New England has any store in July been the scene of the delighted throngs that were here Monday. Thousands secured all their Summer needs at half price and less, and saved enough money to pay all their vacation expenses. Don't miss this great value-giving occasion—the ONE BIG BARGAIN EVENT IN BOSTON—No other sale like this in New England. You must read this sensational list of Callahan & Morrissy Anniversary Specials. Check the ones you want and come tomorrow. Hundreds of other special lots.

NOTICE: Callahan & Morrissy, now retired, were one of the oldest and most favorably known stores in New York City for two generations, and for 28 years occupied a big building on West 14th St., New York's busiest shopping thoroughfare, extending through the entire block to 13th St. The Callahan & Morrissy reputation for high-grade merchandise last year made our half-price sale appeal to the most discriminating. Values and qualities now offered are fully up to the standard fixed by last year's event.

WASHINGTON-BOSTON EXPRESS TRAIN DASHED FROM TRESTLE

This car, more fragile than others of the train, coffined a number of the dead. In a heap into which they had been tossed were four dead men, a dead woman and a dead child—the child clasped to the cold breast of the mother.

Sitting on top of this human wreckage was a little baby, uninjured, and crying bitterly.

The prompt work of Patrolman Bulkley of the Bridgeport police saved scores from being roasted to death in the wreckage. He saw the train leap from the tracks and plunge over the bank and immediately turned in a fire alarm. Within five minutes fifty firemen and several engines were on the scene and the flames that instantly burst from the wreck were extinguished before they reached any of the injured and pinned down passengers.

Confusion was so great that it was impossible then to fix the responsibility for the wreck, but the railroad officials said at first that it was due to the carelessness of the operator in the signal tower on the overhead crossing.

Clarence Hemingway of No. 277 Noble avenue, Bridgeport, was the switch operator at the tower. When he heard the crash he must have gone insane and jumped from the top of the tower. He could not be found.

A. M. Curtis the engineer was a relief man. The regular engineer, whose name is Fowler, took a train up the Harlem river division. Curtis took this train up this division to relieve Fowler.

Riding in the day coach with his wife was W. H. Sanders of New London. He was thrown about and escaped with severe sprains and a few slight cuts while the clothing had to be cut off his wife in order to release her from the wreckage. With his bare hands he tore away the burning cloth and wood, putting out the flames. Across the aisle from him a man was killed.

The conductor of the wrecked train, Michael Furey of New Rochelle, N. Y., escaped with severe cuts on his head.

The body of the engineer was found on the elevated structure, alongside of the open switch he had jumped, only to be run over by the train.

Under the locomotive, which lay in the street a mass of twisted junk, was the body of the fireman. The splintered remains of the Pullman day coach, the third car of the train, held more dead and injured than any of the others. One woman in this car had lost an eye and was otherwise terribly injured. Her shrieks of anguish led the rescuers to the car which they had to dig down through an enormous mass of wreckage to reach. Morphine was administered to her, but she died within a few minutes.

A morgue was hastily improvised on a nearby lawn and the bodies were laid out there in a row and covered with sheets from the sleeping cars. The enormous mass of wreckage completely blocked Fairfield avenue, which is one of the city's main thoroughfares.

The wreck of the big Pacific type locomotive was littered from curb to curb with the remains of the mail car on top of it, and the baggage car on top of that. The Pullmans were reduced to kindling wood.

The bodies of eight of the dead were taken out from the south side of the wreck and two were taken from the north side of the wreckage. In less than an hour every physician in Bridgeport was assisting in the relief work, while automobiles and wagons were offered and utilized as ambulances.

Taken to the Hospitals.

Twenty of the most seriously injured were taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, while most of the less badly hurt were treated at the Bridgeport Hospital.

Thousands crowded to the scene from every part of the city and all of the reserve police had to be rushed to the scene and fire lines established to keep the hordes of morbid and curious from hampering the rescue work.

Lieutenant Rogers, whose child was among the killed, was on his way to Boston accompanied by his wife. Mrs. Rogers was reported among the missing.

Frank A. Hoyt of Boston was among those hurt.

The first dead victim to be identified was Charles Christie of Philadelphia.

The train, a fast express, was running from the Capital to Boston with every berth occupied. It makes no stop at Bridgeport, and was going fully fifty miles an hour at the time of the accident.

The Fairfield avenue crossing is some distance from the heart of the city, but the crash of the falling train and the roar of steam escaping from broken pipes awakened the neighborhood and soon spread the alarm of the wreck.

When police and ambulances from the hospitals arrived they could see little in the darkness but a twisted, piled up heap of wood and steel. With the aid of all the members of the fire department, who were summoned to the grim task, lighted by lanterns and flares improvised on the spot, the work of removing the dead and injured was begun.

The injured, many of them beyond all medical aid, were removed to St. Vincent's, Bridgeport and the Wright Hospitals. Persons near the scene of the disaster threw open their homes to the less severely hurt.

Every doctor in Bridgeport was called to the scene and worked frantically in the midst of the wreckage.

So far the only survivor of the wreck who had been able to make a report to the New York office of the N. Y., N. H. & H. was a Pullman car conductor. He said he believed that practically all the train crew except himself had met death. A hastly investigation on the scene he reported, showed that the switch at the crossing was at fault.

The scene at the Fairfield avenue crossing at daylight, the conductor said, was terrifying. Dead, dying and injured lay all about on the lawns of the houses bordering the railroad tracks, while firemen and volunteers tore frantically at the ruins of the heavy cars to reach the injured inside. Many of these were badly hurt, but there were others simply pinned down. Their cries and groans were heart-rending.

The baseball players of the St. Louis team, who had boarded the train at Philadelphia, and who are scheduled to play in Boston to-day, were among the first to lend a hand at the work of rescuing. They were all hurled out of their berths when the crash came, but recovered themselves quickly, and immediately set to work to drag the victims from the wrecked cars.

The four tracks at the scene were blocked by the wreck and traffic is suspended. A wrecking crew from New Haven and another from New York are on the way to the scene.

As the crash came when all the passengers were in their berths, the work if identifying the victims will prove the most difficult. Clothing and other

Back Numbers of Pictures Enable Anyone to Enter the Great

$10,000 Proverb Contest

At Any Time. Start Today!

Swiftly and incessantly the spirit of the Boston AMERICAN'S $10,000 Proverb Prize Contest is sweeping North, East, South and West.

Every section of New England, every city, town, village and hamlet, should be represented in this unique and fascinating competition which offers a truly useful group of prizes for a little mental effort.

Those who do not live in Boston have the same opportunity of winning these magnificent prizes as those who do.

It is only a question or relative skill and judgment in solving the seventy-five (75) puzzle pictures which compose the contest.

These pictures are being published one each day in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN.

If by chance you have overlooked this great opportunity thus far, that does not close its doors to you. You may enter now, just as well as you could have entered when the first picture was published. The American's Contest Department, No. 275 Devonshire street, is fully supplied with all the back numbers of the puzzle pictures.

By sending the regular price of the AMERICAN any one may obtain all of the puzzle pictures which have been printed, as well as answer blanks, exactly like those in the AMERICAN accompanying the puzzle pictures. Sunday back numbers are 5c. (plus return postage). Daily back numbers are 1c (plus return postage).

Why not send for the back numbers this evening and give yourself the satisfaction of having tried, at least, for that grand, handsome $2,500 Bungalow Home at the Seashore; that Metz 1912 4-cylinder Runabout Automobile; one of the beautiful Pianos; one of the classy speed Power Boats, or any of the others in this long list of 1,000 prizes.

To aid contestants in reaching quick and correctly-worded solutions of the puzzle pictures, the AMERICAN has issued a most attractive and useful PROVERB BOOK. It contains more than 3,000 proverbs, including all those that will be used in the contest, and is THE authoritative guide for contestants.

Thus anyone who sends for the PROVERB BOOK will be assured whenever he or she is in doubt about a puzzle that the correct solution is somewhere within the neat covers of the volume which serves as a catalogue to the competition.

A copy of the AMERICAN'S PROVERB BOOK will be mailed to any one upon receipts of a money order for 25c.; this covers postage either in or out of the city.

All contestants, and any persons who are interested in the Proverb Contest, will soon have an opportunity to see the plans of the $2,500 Bungalow, which will shortly appear in the columns of the AMERICAN, together with a detailed description of the other prizes.

Do not let another day go by before entering for these rich and unparalleled rewards.

It is so easy to enter!

You do not need to send us your name, or incur any obligations of any sort. Just solve today's puzzle picture, and save it, then send for the back numbers of those that have been published previously. Then you are a contestant in full standing, and you are on an equal basis with those who entered on the first day of the contest.

Here are the puzzle pictures and the answer blanks right before you.

Got a pencil?

Good!

You are already on your way to victory.

The best of luck to you!

Hold all answers until you have the entire set. No answers will be considered if sent in before the publication of the last picture.

Conditions of the Contest.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN PROVERB CONTEST is a contest of skill and judgment. Prizes to the amount of $10,000 will be given absolutely free by the Boston American to the winners. Every one living in New England, irrespective of age, is eligible to enter this contest.

Each set of answers must contain only one answer to each picture, but each person is entitled to send in three complete sets of answers.

The answers to the puzzle pictures may be sent in writing in longhand either with pen or pencil; they may be written on the typewriter or may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant.

Participants in any other contest now being run or which may be run by the American will not debar any one from entering the contest.

Each contestant or any or all members of the family will be allowed to submit one, two or three sets of answers, but each set must contain only one answer to each picture. Each set will be considered separately, but no contestant can win more than one prize. All employes of the American and their families are absolutely barred from participating in this contest.

In case there are no complete lists of correct answers, prizes will be awarded to the persons submitting the nearest correct solutions. In case of a tie, award will be made on the basis of neatness and exact accuracy, but if the tie cannot be decided in that way the tied contestants will receive similar prizes.

Do not send your answers now. Keep them from day to day and at the end of the contest arrange them in numerical order and then send them all in at one time.

Under no circumstances should contestants begin to send in their answers now, as any answers sent in before the last picture is printed will not be considered.

Time will not be a factor in awarding the prizes. The first answers sent in after the contest closes will stand no better chance of winning a prize than the last answer submitted.

All answers must be delivered at the BOSTON AMERICAN CONTEST HEADQUARTERS, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass., either by mail or in person, within the specified time limit. It is contemplated to give contestants ten days to two weeks after the close of the contest to prepare their answers, so that they can be sent in altogether at one time.

The American will not be responsible for the receipt of any answers unless sent by registered mail and addressed to "PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass."

In case contestants desire further information they should address their questions to PROVERB CONTEST EDITOR, Boston American, 275 Devonshire Street, Boston, Mass.

There will be seventy-five puzzle pictures in the series used in the contest. The solutions of these pictures may be sent in on the coupons printed in the Daily and Sunday American, or may be written on separate slips of paper. The use of the coupon is desirable, but not necessary.

The Editor of the PROVERB CONTEST reserves the right to make any change in, or addition to, these conditions that he may deem necessary for properly conducting the contest, and his decision on any question which may arise will be absolutely final.

ST. LOUIS BALL PLAYERS HEROES IN RESCUING INJURED

ans of identification were so scattered out that it was impossible to tell to om most of it belonged. After the dead l injured are taken out a careful effort l be made to assemble baggage and thing in order that the work of identi ation may be expedited.

Train Crew Among Victims.

The engineer, fireman, conductor and eral others of the train crew were ong the dead.

The ball players were all in the two r coaches which were the only ones escape derailment. The ball players re the heroes of the wreck. Clad in ir night clothes they plunged into the oking wreck and rescued a dozen or re injured and imprisoned passengers o would have been certainly killed.

The train, one of the fastest expresses the road, was running from Washing n to Boston with every berth occupied. makes no stop at Bridgeport and was nning fifty miles an hour when it mped the overhead crossing at Fairfield enue. Early investigation indicated at there was something wrong with the itch.

The engine leaped straight into the air d over the side of the trestle, pulling the nder and six cars with it. No sooner had e wreckage piled up in the street than e baggage car caught fire. The flames reatened to spread to the sleepers, where any injured passengers were imprisoned. chemical apparatus was rushed to the ene, however, in time to avert the added rror of incineration of the injured and ead.

Crash Awakes Neighborhood.

The Fiarfield venue crossing is some stance from the heart of the city, but e crash of the falling train and the roar steam escaping from broken pipes awak ed the neighborhood and soon spread the arm of the wreck.

When police and ambulances from the spitals arrived they could see little in e darkness but a twisted, piled-up heap wood and steel. With the aid of all e members of the fire department who ere summoned, and lighted by lanterns d flares improvised on the spot, the ork of removing the dead and injured as begun.

It was some time before the first body as recovered and then they were given p by the wreckage in rapid succession.

The injured were removed to St. Vin ent's, Bridgeport, and the Wright hos itals. Persons near the scene of the atastrophe threw open their homes to the ss severely hurt. Every doctor in Bridge ort was called to the scene and worked antically in the midst of the wreckage.

As the crash came when all the pas engers were in their berths the work of dentifying the victims proved most diffi ult.

The Cardinal ball players, speeding from hiladelphia to Boston, narrowly escaped eath in the wreck. All of them were adly shaken up.

Rube Geyer suffered a sprained wrist, ut otherwise the injured were limited to cratches.

Five cars were demolished when the rain plunged off the thirty-foot trestle. wo Pullmans carrying the ball players did not leave the tracks. All the other coaches rolled down an embankment.

Roger Bresnahan, Wreck Hero, in His Diamond Togs

The manager-captain of the St. Louis Cardinals, who were scheduled to play in Boston this afternoon, took a leading part with his fellow-players in the rescue work following the Federal Express wreck at Bridgeport to-day.

The players assisted in rescuing the passengers in the day coach, all of whom were injured. Roger Bresnahan and Ivey Wingo probably saved a woman's life when they, in their bare feet, attired only in pajamas, pulled the woman from under the debris where the fire started.

Prompt work by the Bridgeport fire department saved scores of the injured from being roasted to death.

A mistake by the train crew probably saved the ball players' lives. When the Cardinals boarded their train out of Philadelphia they occupied the fourth and fifth coaches from the engine. When the train was backed on the ferry to circle Manhattan Island it was divided into four sections of three cars each. In making over the train after landing off the East River, the section carrying the players was tacked on at the rear of the train.

That put Huggins, Hauser, Mowry, Koney, Sallee, Steele, Golden, Bliss, Ellis, Evans and Oakes in the last coach. Manager Bresnahan, Treasurer Seckamp, McIvor, McAdams, Wingo Smith, the two Laudermilks, Geyer and two newspaper men occupied the second to last coach. Everybody awoke in a huddled mass in the aisle of the Pullman a few minutes before 4 o'clock. The train had come to a sudden stop and the cars carrying the ball players, becoming derailed, keeled over against a telegraph pole.

Bresnahan Gives Orders.

For a minutes there was lots of excitement. Then Bresnahan's voice was heard over the screams of some of the younger men, and Roger admonished his players to take their time and get out.

In less than a minute the players were scurrying out of the coach in their bare feet. Soon the screams of women in the cars ahead were heard and then Manager Bresnahan and Ed Koney led a relief corps to the scene of the disaster.

Without waiting to get dressed the players pitched in and helped extricate the women and children from the day coach. Wallace Smith rescued two infants who were found under the wreckage without so much as a scratch.

It was wellnigh two hours before a relief train arrived. Most of the Cardinal uniforms were lost in the wrecked baggage car. Miller, Huggins, Hauser, Bresnahan, Mowry, Evans and Oakes lost their clothes. This, it was said, probably would necessitate calling off the game scheduled with Boston this afternoon.

FEAR FOR RAILROAD MAN SUPPOSED TO BE IN THE WRECK

The local passenger offices of the Pennsylvania Railroad is anxious about W. G. Parmelee, one of the traveling agents connected with the Boston office. Mr. Parmelee was expected to come to Boston on this train to-day, but it was not known definitely whether he was in the wreck or not.

SOMERVILLE MAN PINNED IN BERTH WHEN CRASH CAME

BRIDGEPORT, July 11.—John Murdock of Somerville, Mass., bookkeeper of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company of Boston, was one of the injured passengers. Seen at St. Vincent's Hospital, he said he was returning from a business trip to Cranston, W. Va.

"I was dozing in my berth when the crash came," he said. "I suddenly felt as though my blood had left me. I found myself pinned down in the berth, but managed to crawl out of the car and was removed to the hospital."

One woman was found conscious in one of the cars with a big block of granite pinning her foot down and the head of a dead man resting upon her face. She remained in this position for a long time before she was rescued. Another woman was seen with her head out of a window of one of the cars crying at the top of her voice, "My baby, where is my baby?"

The child was found a few moments later dead and the woman was taken to the hospital in an hysterical state.

Michael J. Furey was the conductor of the train. He was terribly injured and was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital. His home is in New Rochell. He suffered a fractured skull, one arm dislocated, the sight of one eye is probably gone and he has twelve other minor injuries. Seen during a few moments of consciousness he said that he was in the third car when the crash came. He knew what it was at once. He sair the car toppled over with a roar and he remembers nothing more until he regained consciousness in the hospital. He had been in the employ of the New Haven road for 30 years and in charge of the Federal express for seven years.

FEARS HER LITTLE BROTHER MET DEATH IN TRAIN DISASTER

Orrin Wilson, twelve years old, and a pupil at the Girard College in Philadelphia, is supposed to have been on the Federal Express, but did not arrive at the South Station on the train bringing wreck survivors. Mrs. James Gompers, of Suite 2, No. 252 Massachusetts avenue, his sister, was there to meet him and was overcome by anxiety and grief when the boy did not leave the train. She searched it and the station before she left for home.

"I am sure my little brother is killed," she said. "He sent a special delivery letter, saying he was coming to visit me and that he would take the train that was wrecked."

CLIFTONDALE GIRL ON INJURED LIST OF WRECK VICTIMS

Miss Bertha Monroe of Cliftondale, who is among the injured, was on her way home to attend the funeral of her half-brother in Cliftondale to-morrow. Her father is Alexander Monroe, well known in Cliftondale, and her brother is manager of the Leslie dry goods store in Haverhill.

Miss Monroe is very popular in Cliftondale. She left that town last Fall to teach in the South. She is the youngest member of the Monroe family, and is twenty-four years old.

BAGGAGEMASTER IN WRECK WELL KNOWN IN DORCHESTER

Frank A. Hoyt, baggagemaster on the Federal express, who is among the injured, boards at No. 10 Malta street, Mattapan. He has been with the New Haven Railroad for a number of years and is a well known railroad man. In Dorchester he is a member of a number of clubs and organizations.

BOB MOHA READY FOR GARDNER GO

Bob Moha of Milwaukee, who meets Jimmy Gardner of Lowell in a twelve-round contest at the Armory A. A. to-night, has received word from his home city that the Milwaukee Club would match him with Billy Papke, if he won over Jimmy Gardner. Moha replied to close the match with Papke, as he is confident of winning over the boy from the Spindle City. Moha finished his training yesterday morning and then went to Nantasket Beach to enjoy a good night's rest.

Gardner is pronounced in first-class shape by a number of friends who have watched him train for this match. With both contestants in the best possible shape, the bout to-night should be the best middleweight contest ever decided in this city.

The eight-round semi-final between George Robinson, the popular ex-amateur from Cambridge and Jack Cottman of Philadelphia, is bound to be a warm affair, both being aggressive and hard hitters.

A six-round bout between Joe Brown of Boston and Billy Yarkes and a six-round bout between Ted Thompson of Chicago and Dave Powers of Malden completes the program.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

LYNCH ANGRY AT UMPIRE BAITING

NEW YORK, July 11.—"I'll stop this sort of thing," said President T. J. Lynch of the National League when the account of the Magee-Finneran fight at Philadelphia was read to him. "I shall take the first train for Philadelphia," he continued, "to investigate this case thoroughly."

Mr. Lynch declined to discuss the merits of the arguments between Magee and Finneran until he had heard the story of all concerned, but reiterated that an end would be put to such fights, however drastic measures should be necessary.

"It is because Finneran is a new umpire; they just won't let these new umpires get along," the league president exclaimed.

Finneran was an Eastern League umpire of five years' experience, who was added to the National League staff this year.

GOLFERS MEET HIGH IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

MOUNT WASHINGTON, Bretton Woods, N. H., July 11.—All the members of the American Golf Association of Advertising Interests have arrived at Bretton Woods on a special train from Lake Champlain.

All the men and women members play four-ball foursomes to-day for net prize, and the chief events start on Wednesday with an eighteen-hole qualification round. The Boston district is particularly represented, with R. M. Purves, Woodland; W. L. Crocker, S. L. Lowe, Brae-Burn; G. E. Hall, C. B. Smith, E. F. Daly, Commonwealth; George Dutton, Oakley; R. R. Whitman, Woodland; John Shepard, Providence; J. D. Plummer, Springfield; R. J. Allyn, Hartford, and one or two others who have entered but have not put in an appearance as yet.

NATIONAL LEAGUE TEAMS CLOSE UP

The fight for the leadership in the National League pennant race is sure to be quite as interesting this week as last, when the Giants, Phillies and Cubs showed the way in turn. Five teams were within striking distance, and three of them are so close together that a change in position can be looked for almost any day.

The Chicago Cubs, who are still playing good baseball in spite of the fact that so many new cogs have been necessary in the remarkable machine of recent years, will be at New York for one more game to-day, before moving over to do battle with Brooklyn. The Giants can expect no respite, however, as the Pittsburg Pirates are ready to move in on Tuesday for a four-game series.

McDERMOTT ENTERS NATIONAL GOLF GAME

NEW YORK, July 11.—The belated entry of J. J. McDermott, the young Atlantic City golfer who won the distinction at Chicago recently of being the first American-born player to win the national open championship, was received for the annual open meeting of the Metropolitan Golf Association, which began to-day over the links of the Englewood, N. J., Country Club course. It is agreeable news to golfers, who wish generally to see McDermott in action now that he has won the coveted title.

Robert Andrews of the Yale Golf Club and Oswalk Kirkby of Englewood are among an unusually large number of entrants.

BANNON QUITS HAVERHILL NINE

HAVERHILL, July 11.—Jimmy Bannon has quit the management of the Haverhill club and President Clohecy has again assumed active charge. Bannon quit because of interference on the part of President Clohecy in the game Friday and the first game Saturday.

Regarding the rumors of trades between Haverhill and New Bedford and between Haverhill and Lowell, President Clohecy said this afternoon that there was nothing to them. As regards Lowell President Clohecy had a trade on in which McGamwell was to figure, but the player did not want to go to Lowell, and the deal was called off.

President Clohecy figured that the trade would benefit the club if he could get a couple of players. McGamwell's finger that he split in the game of Friday is in pretty bad shape and may keep him out of the game for some time. In the meantime, Spring will probably play the first sack.

President Clohecy also deals a death blow to the rumors of the sale of the club to the Boston Americans. He says there is nothing in the story, and that furthermore he has never set a price on the club.

When Hugh Duffy asked him to set a price on the club President Clohecy says that he declined, saying that he would let the stockholders do it if they chose, but when the matter was put up to the board of directors they refused to listen to any possible sale.

President Clohecy has no manager in sight and will go on with the club himself.

LAND GOES TO ST. PAUL.

ST. PAUL, July 11.—The St. Paul baseball club has purchased Catcher Grover Land from the Cleveland club of the American League. Land is expected to report tomorrow.

Notes Gathered Between Innings

This was the first appearance here of that umpirical combination of Brennan and Klem.

Doc Miller was robbed of a hit in the seventh by a lucky one-handed stab by Hoblitzel.

Larry McLean delayed the game between halves of the eighth inning while he served water to a number of kids who were leaning over the Cincinnati bench.

Sweeney opened the sixth with a single to centre, but a hit and run play went wrong and he was nailed at second. Immediately afterward Tenney cracked his home run on to Columbus avenue.

Ted Sullivan, the well-known baseball man, is here on business. He has uncovered a new training camp at Tioga, Texas, and has given John I. Taylor first refusal of it.

The Reds announced the trade of Biz Beck for Bert Humphries, the Philly pitcher. Manager Griffith had no place for Beck and was in need of a right-handed pitcher.

BOWLING BY THE LIGHT OF MOON

Bowling on the green by moonlight, also arc light, was a new attraction at the rinks at Franklin Field, Dorchester, last night. The contest was conducted under the auspices of the Boston Bowling Green Club, of which A. F. Clark is president. Both aggregations were composed of the most proficient players of the club and played under the directions of John Watts and A. C. C. Hill, skips. Skip Watt's team won by the score of 21 to 5.

When the game began there were few onlookers, but the news soon became known throughout the section, and hundreds gathered at the field.

The clever bowling of William Jardine, considered to be one of the most skilful devotees of the sport in this country, brought forth plaudits. C. W. Munro, Jr., displayed exceptional ability, C. E. Putnam and Tim Carr of the losing aggregation rolling the oaken sphere superbly, too.

THOUGHT GLOVER WON BATTLE OVER BRONSON

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 11.—Although Ray Bronson, the Indianapolis boxer, entered the ring almost a 2-to-1 favorite over Johnny Glover of Boston in their eight-round encounter at the Southern A. C., the fans were far from pleased at the Indiana boy's performance and were howling for a draw at the end, when Referee Haack awarded the decision to Bronson.

Bronson forced the fighting in almost every round, but Glover always fought back gamely and at times caused Bronson to back up with powerful body blows. There were no knockdowns and the only damage displayed was Glover's partly closed eye, a result of Bronson's right swings.

The early rounds were tame, with Bronson doing the forcing, but Glover evened up in the middle rounds.

DICK HYLAND WINS FROM ANDY BEZENAH

LOUISVILLE, July 11.—Fighting Dick Hyland was given the decision over Andy Bezenah after 10 rounds of fast fighting before the Tri-City A. C. at Jeffersonville, Ind. Marvin Hart refereed the bout and his decision gave fair satisfaction.

Bezenah had a shade the better of the first two rounds, but Hyland after feeling out his man in the early stages soon rained showers of body blows on his opponent. Hyland had a shade in every succeeding round except the seventh, when Bezenah landed several tellings blows on body and face. He inflicted a slight cut over Dick's right eye, but the member was not closed. There were some in the crowd of 2,000 who thought the decision should have been a draw. Hyland weighed 135 pounds and Bezenah 133½.

CHIEF BENDER'S UNIQUE BONUS

Chief Bender of the Athletics has had a peculiar contract to sign for the last several seasons. Connie Mack, instead of giving the Indian a big salary, as he deserves, has him sign a blank contract and at the end of the season he puts in a bonus which he thinks pays for the Indian's work. This started in 1908, when Bender told a reporter he would quit and become a traveling salesman. But it didn't work with Connie and he offered congratulations and sent a contract for $2,000, according to league requirements. Bender hurried to Connie and told him it was all a joke, but Connie said that was all he could pay him until he had shown he would pitch winning ball. Besides his share in the gate receipts Bender got $4,000 in salary in 1910.

POLICE STOP FLYNN-ROSS SCHEDULED BOUT

ROCHESTER, N. Y., July 11.—The Armory Athletic Association was notified by Police Commissioner C. S. Owen that any attempt to pull off a fight would result in the arrest of the promoters and the fighters as fast as the latter stepped in the ring.

Thus the ten-round bout between Tony Ross and Porky Flynn was called off. Over 300 tickets had been sold during the afternoon to visiting Shriners here for their convention.

PLAYER HITS UMP. FINNERAN

PHILADELPHIA, July 11.—At the Philadelphia and St. Louis National League game, Sherwood Magee, left fielder of the home team, assaulted Umpire Finneran. The latter's lip was split and he was compelled to go to a hospital to have it sewed up.

Magee protested vigorously when he was called out by Umpire Rigler while trying to steal second base. In the next inning Magee was called out on strikes by Umpire Finneran. Magee threw his hat into the air and started away from the plate. For this exhibition of disapproval of the umpire's judgment, Finneran ordered him to the clubhouse.

Magee turned and rushed at Finneran, who stepped toward the player. The men clinched for a second. Then Magee stepped back and, pushing Finneran away, shot out his left with full force. The blow landed on Finneran's mouth and he fell to the ground knocked out.

A score of players rushed to the spot with Assistant Umpire Rigler. Finneran got to his feet with blood flowing from the gash in his lip and made a rush toward Magee, but he was held by the players. Magee walked to the home team's bench, but Finneran broke away from the players. Rigler ran after him and at the bench Finneran had to be again forcibly restrained from attacking the left fielder.

After going to the dressing room and finding that he could not stop the flow of blood, Finneran was taken to a hospitau. Rigler finished the game alone.

Magee says that the assault was provoked by Finneran calling him an offensive name when he was ordered off the field.

Umpire Finneran denies that he called Magee any names. "I simply told him to get out of the game," said Finneran. "I will leave it to Roger Bresnahan, who stood near and heard all that was said."

PITCHER JOHNSON LOSING HIS SPEED

Walter Johnson is much puzzled as to why it is he can no longer pitch the ball he did in former years. He is at a loss to explain his slump, which he freely admits he has encountered.

"I can't give any explanation for my failure to pitch up to my old standard," said Johnson recently. "I am perfectly well now—in fact, never felt better in my life. I eat and sleep perfectly and my arm feels as strong as iron. When I warm up, and during the first and second innings, I feel very well satisfied with myself, for I could tell the way the ball was leaving my hand that I had my speed without having to exert myself. But in about the third inning I feel myself slipping. I try to force myself, but the more I try the less I seemed to get on the ball."

ST. LOUIS IN WRECK GAME HERE IS CALLED

By R. W. LARDNER.

The opening game between the Rustlers and St. Louis Cardinals, scheduled for this afternoon, has been called off. The St. Louis players were in the wreck of the Federal express and, while none of them suffered any injury, the men were badly shaken up and unable to play ball.

There will be a double-header at the South End Grounds to-morrow afternoon between the Rustlers and St. Louis Cardinals. The first game will start at 2 o'clock. To-day's postponement, a result of the Federal express wreck, made the bargain bill possible.

The fans were looking forward to the series with great interest as the Cardinals have been coming along like a cyclone.

Roger Bresnahan has accomplished wonders. He is winning from good and bad teams alike with a pitching staff of youngsters. He has his bunch fighting and making a bid for every battle it goes into. But Roger mustn't be given all the credit. A lot of it belongs to Miller Huggins, who plays second base for the Cards, and who is one of the cleverest infielders in the pastime. Miller is sometimes mentioned when bugs are discussing "brains" in the game but he isn't mentioned often enough in this connection. There aren't three other athletes who know baseball better than the little Card, and not that many who apply their knowledge as he does.

Just Watch Huggins.

Watch that St. Louis infield work and you will see for yourself how valuable this small gentleman is. Besides keeping the others steady, he is constantly pulling off the stuff commonly known as "inside baseball" and doing good with it. He is never compared with Schulte, Wagner or Magee as a slugger, yet he reaches first base as often as anybody and is the most prominent factor in his team's scoring.

Cincinnati made one awful error when it allowed Huggins to escape. The Red infield isn't so smart that it wouldn't be helped by a man like him. Furthermore, Huggins is made of the real managerial stuff. He has more than his share of pepper, knows what he's doing every minute and enjoys the respect of his mates.

On paper the Cardinals don't loom up as pennant contenders. But it isn't paper that counts. They are winning their games and they are going to be up among the first three next year if they don't finish that well this time.

Pitchers in Shape.

Well, they're here now to battle the Rustlers, and said hustlers must go faster than they have been going to make any sort of a showing. St. Louis has real pitchers in real pitching shape, which is more than can be said of Cincinnati, which wound up its second local engagement Monday. Sallee, Harmon, Golden and Steele are the four who are being worked regularly, and if the Bostonians can beat two of them, they ought to feel pretty good about it.

Unofficial figures show pretty clearly the real reason why the Rustlers are losing so many more games than they win. These figures say that the batting average of opponents against the Boston pitchers is over .300, something like .302. This means that about one man out of every three who come to bat against Boston gets a base hit. When you also take into account the bases on balls given by Tenney's slabbists, you won't wonder that the Rustlers' foes are piling up big scores.

However, the Reds didn't do any .300 hitting against Hank Weaver Monday. Mike Mitchell was about the only one who could do anything at all with this Southerner, who was much better than his fellow rebels, McTigue and Griffin, in the Saturday game.

BASEBALL CHATTER

Empire Cy Rigler is of the opinion that there are three privates in the National League ranks who would make first-class managers. All three of the men are second basemen—Evers of the Cubs, Knabe of the Phillies, and Huggins of the Cardinals. Cy thinks these men have all the characteristics that go to make up the successful leader—brains, fighting spirit, mechanical ability and "chestiness." This latter ingredient must not be confused with common swelheadedness. The latter usually makes its possessor unpopular, while the right kind of chestiness does not. Chance and McGraw, two of the best managers, have it, and it is one of the things that make them as successful as they are.

* * *

That Ray Fisher, the New York Yankee's pitcher, has won respect in the proper circles is evidenced by the fact that both Ty Cobb and Larry Lajoie picked him as one of the twelve best hurlers in the American League. Walsh, Ford, Johnson and our own Joe Wood are the other four who were honored by both the Georgia Peach and the big Frenchman. Fisher is often overlooked when fans are studying the stars. But he is a star and belongs right in the Ford-Wood-Walsh class. His fast ball is a beauty, and he has a curve that few others can boast of. Ray is a schoolmaster in the off-season, and he uses his head all the year round on the mound or at the blackboard.

* * *

It is to be hoped that Harold Janvrin will develop into a real first baseman and prove capable of filling the berth that has been practically empty since Jake Stahl played his last game as a Sock. Janvrin has the necessary size and, according to the St. Louis scribes, he acts as if he had played the position all his life. Managers usually insist on a first baseman's ability to hit, but the Sox would be perfectly satisfied if Harold took care of the fielding end capably and allowed the others to do the slugging. Boston's American Leaguers make enough runs, and what they most need right now is stronger defensive work.

FANS LIKE TO SEE NEW TEAMS

MIDDLEBORO, July 11.—There is much speculation here among the baseball fans as to the outcome of the Trolley League, which started out at the first of the season with eight teams. Now since Stoughton and Rockland have withdrew there are but six teams to finish the series. Whitman and Holbrook were to withdraw, but later the management of these teams changed their minds and stayed. There is a question here among the fans if the Trolley League, as far as this town is concerned, has been a success.

It is very certain, however, since Saturday's game here, when the Bridgewater team put it all over the locals 12 to 2 that the attendance at these games here will be lessened somewhat if better ball is not put up.

The fans are free to remark that they had rather see faster ball with a varied assortment of teams than to see the same teams right along.

Managers Murphy and O'Toole have made no decisions about the success or failure of the Trolley League, and it is most probable that they will finish the season as planned unless the league breaks up.

MIDDLEBORO STUDENTS PLAYING STAR GAME

MIDDLEBORO, July 11.—A new baseball aggregation has come into the limelight here in the students' team, the members of which have been playing on the high school team and some picked players outside. Thus far they have been playing speedy ball, and have several games booked with Carver, Lakesides, Sagamore, Plympton and Wareham. Stuart Keedwell is captain, and the following lineup has been formed: Catcher, Lightford; pitcher, Keedwell. The bases are covered by Swift at first, R. Mendall at second and Witbeck at third. T. Mendall covers shortstop, with Morse, Alden and White in the field.

OVERCOME BY THE HEAT

Another sad result of the hot wave is just reported. For more than a year she had been in excellent health, but yesterday she broke down and was taken tenderly where so many of her kindred have been skillfully treated and restored to perfect condition. Are you having trouble? You ought to know that Wilson Bros., the Scollay Sq. jewelers, have 10 skilled watchmakers and do one of the largest watch repairing businesses in Boston. Their only store, next to the Big Teakettle, is a safe place to trade. Open evenings.

WOLGAST-WELSH FIGHT IS SURE

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11.—San Francisco had the last lightweight championship battle and Los Angeles is to have the next.

All arrangements for a twenty-round match between Ad Wolgast and Freddie Welsh were completed in the Southern city to-day. Tom McCarey is to promote the affair and the lightweights are to meet in the Vernon arena in the afternoon of next Thanksgiving Day. The fact that McCarey has secured the pugilistic plum after which more than one promoter has been straining, will not come as a surprise to such San Francisco sports as are aware of former affiliations between McCarey and the two lightweight rivals.

Wolgast has fought many times in the city named and so has Welsh. Both of these lads resided in Los Angeles for quite a while and formed many friendships there. They are both friendly with McCarey, have confidence in his managerial capacity and feel that they will receive square treatment from him. Under the circumstances there was every reason for expecting that McCarey would land the attraction, more especially as the meeting to arrange the match was held in "Uncle" Tom's bailiwick.

Three-Cornered Tourney.

Jones's intimation that his champion needs a rest and may not don the gloves again until the fight with Welsh, will be keen disappointment to Packey McFarland and Knockout Brown, English Matt Wells and maybe others who have designs on Wolgasts's laurels. Each of the fighters named has announced that he has backing to the extent of $10,000 for a championship fight with Wolgast. But Wells seems to have taken the wind out of their sails. If Jones remains adamant in his resolve not to allow Wolgast to fight before next Thanksgiving, it might not be a bad idea for McFarland, Brown and Wells to institute a three-cornered tourney with the understanding that the survivor is to have first crack at the winner of the Welsh-Wolgast affair.

Freddie Welsh has not tied himself down to idleness. He announces that he will figure in a couple of contests down Los Angeles way before he begins training for the big fight with Wolgast. Freddie is too shrewd a fellow, however, to undertake anything that will militate against his chances of boxing Wolgast and it is more than likely that whatever bouts Welsh engages in will not involve any particular risk to the British lightweight's reputation.

No Side Bet.

Promoter McCarey, by the way, has placed his veto on the side bet, being timorous of permitting anything that would give his glove contest the flavor of a regular prize fight. This will be welcome news to the British sportsmen who responded to Welsh's call for backing. Instead of having to wager their $10,000 at even with Wolgast, they will be able to avail themselves of the odds that prevail when the match is near at hand.

That Wolgast will be a strong favorite goes without saying. In the first place a champion is invariably the favorite with men who wager on the events of the ring, and in the next, the Michigan wildcat's masterly handling of Owen Moran has entrenched him more strongly still with the betting fraternity. While there is no saying what the price against Welsh will be, it is quite likely that the men who are sending money from England to place on Freddie Welsh will receive as liberal odds as did backers of Owen Moran, namely, ten to six.

It does not follow, however, that Welsh will prove as easy a mark as Moran. Freddie is a clean living fellow and exceedingly wiry. Even this early many of those who believe Wolgast next to invincible are expressing the belief that the champion will find in Welsh an exceedingly tough customer.

SHAKEUP IN TEAM HELP IN BROCKTON

BROCKTON, July 11.—Harry Smythe, a Brockton pitcher, has been released, the fine showing made by Gaw in his first two games making a change possible in order to keep down to the limit. Manager Flanagan is undecided what shifts he will make when Paul Howard, the new outfielder, arrives. The fine batting of McLane during the past two weeks, coupled with the remarkable work of Smith and Henriksen, the other outfielders, makes the situation more difficult. Smith may be tried in the box, but his hitting is needed every day.

Reardon, the pitcher secured two weeks ago from Utica, may be returned to that club, as his showing has been a disappointment.

NO FINISH BOUT OVER IN ENGLAND

By ED. W. SMITH.

Though Jack Johnson, champion of them all, has two matches on at the present time, one with P. O. Curran in Ireland and the other with Bill Lang in Australia next Spring, the world is not going wildly excited over the affairs. In the first place the weather is a bit unseasonable for the festive heavyweight encounter and in the second place the calibre of the men engaged with the champion is not high enough to work up enthusiasm at this time.

The reports from the other side are to the effect that Johnson and Curran, who gets his prefixes of "P. O." because he is a petty officer in the army of the king, are to battle to a finish next month.

No Finish Bouts There.

That is a foolish statement and must emanate from a man who is a long way from being in touch with things pugilistic on the other side. It is impossible under the conditions to hold a finish battle in Ireland or any other portion of Great Britain. The extreme limit is twenty rounds and encounters of that length are permissible under a court decision rendered there some years ago.

There is an interesting story attached to that decision. The gist of it was that a twenty-round contest with the gloves, conducted properly under the rules, is not a prize fight, but a boxing match, for supremacy and to see which of the contestants can score the more points.

Later a queer point was brought up for decision in the court. It was that of a man knocked out in the last round of a twenty-round match after he had outpointed the other by something like four or five to one. The man was thoroughly beaten for about nineteen and three-quarter rounds and then swung his right over and knocked out his opponent. The referee thereupon gave the contest to the knocked out man, contending that the latter's lead on points was so great that it would have been simply impossible for the other to have overcome that lead had the contest gone on to its natural limit and conclusion. The court decided this was the right stand.

There is a law against prize fighting in England, but regular boxing matches are conducted throughout Great Britain under this court decision that a twenty-round match for points is well within the law.

And a court decision in Great Britain means something to the loyal Britishers, something more than a court decision means in this country, even to the loyal Americans.

McGoorty Defeated Curran.

Petty Officer Curran has been heard of in this country. He is the man who was defeated rather decisively by Eddie McGoorty in Dublin on November 26, 1909, upon the occasion of the Oshkosh man's first visit as a fighter to the land of his birth. McGoorty and Curran boxed twenty two-minute rounds and McGoorty gained the decision without a bit of trouble.

Curran is a County Clare Irishman of some size, weighing close to the 200-pound notch. He is said to have improved some since the McGoorty affair, but if he increased his speed and other attainments at the rate of 300 per cent, he would hardly be more than a respectable match for Johnson.

Bill Lang is the Australian who created some furore in England recently, many believing that he had a great chance of pushing to the front. But he lost several battles on fouls and finally was allowed to depart for home quietly and without much comment.

Johnson beat him in Australia in 1907 in nine rounds and Tommy Burns bested him twice, six rounds and again in twenty.

BASEBALL BOOMING AT SUMMER COLONY

HYANNIS, July 11.—Summer baseball is at its height here now, and many of the Summer colonists are college athletes, so that at this time of the year there are some speed boys about the shores. To-morrow there will be a big game played between the championship team of the U. S. S. Nebraska, that is now at Provincetown, and the strong team from here. There is a lot of interest being taken in the game, and several wagers are up on the winner.

GOLF TOPICS ON MANY LINKS

In a foursome at the Commonwealth Country Club a few days ago, "Davy" Brown, the old professional, and T. R. Fuller played against George L. Boden, professional, and M. J. Brady, runner-up in the national and State open championships this year. All four players had driven for the seventh hole, and were approaching, in turn, to the green. "Davy" Brown, who had some thirty yards to the hole, pitched his ball nicely to the green, and, as the sphere rolled towards the hole, the report of a shot gun broke the stillness, and the players heard bullets ripping through the trees. On turning their attention to the game once more, Brown's ball was found resting quietly in the cup. It had dropped simultaneously with the shot. Although there were no marks on it, a stray grape shot apparently had golfing aspirations, and was rooting for Brown.

The number of amateurs and professionals who began their game in the grammar and high schools as caddies or in schoolboy golf is surprising. George L. Boden, Harold Lyall and Dick Kimball are all professionals of ability now and all held the interscholastic championship at one time.

Golf in this State has been obliged to give way for this week only to play in the mountains, where many of our best amateurs have strayed. At Lake Champlain the Advertisers' tournament calls no small percentage of Bay State players, who are all winning prizes, for, in fact, everybody does that in the advertising tourney. In "Manchester-in-the-Mountains" and at Maplewood and Ekwanok are still more attractive meetings.

Next week, however, all will return to take part in the classic Essex County tournament at Manchester-by-the-Sea, the last three days of the week. This course now has Donald Ross, the State open champion, for its professional and with the recent endeavor to make the course equal to its possibilities, there are many players who will try their luck in the open event for the sake of playing one of the most elite and golfy links in the State.

The club championship of the Wollaston Golf Club is waiting for T. M. Claflin and T. R. Fuller to play their match in the semi-final round, the winner playing C. M. Hart, for the title. Mr. Hart defeated R. R. Freeman in the semi-finals 3 up and 1 to play. He is more than capable of giving either Fuller or Claflin a hard rub for the title as it was not long ago that he played a 69 over the course in company with M. J. Brady, the club professional, who himself lowered the record for the course that day playing a 66.

HORSEMEN WILL GO TO CANADA

With the stopping of the Woonsocket race meeting, many of the local horsemen are figuring on shipping their horses to the Maritime Circuit, where there is continuous racing till late into October, besides betting is allowable in Canada on the races.

The circuit there begins next week at Woodstock, then in order come Fredericton, St. John, Moncton, Sussex, Chatham, New Glasgow, Halifax (two weeks), Sydney, St. Stephen, and then back to Fredericton and St. John for two weeks. The purses given are $300 each, and the classes as arranged should suit all the horsemen.

STILL IN HARNESS.

The scribes who have been releasing Jimmy Sheckard every Winter for the last four or five years will probably think twice before they tie a can to the veteran Cub left fielder at the close of the present season. Sheck is playing just as he did when he first broke into fast company, a dozen or so years ago.

Forewarned Is Forearmed

A Few Hints to Young Girls and Men Who Are Contemplating Marriage.

By DOROTHY DIX.

THE other day we discussed some of the ear marks by which a girl could tell what sort of a husband a man would make before she got him, and in time to sidestep a bad matrimonial bargain.

It is equally important that a man should judge of the kind of a wife that a girl will make before he has agreed to stand for her board bill for life.

Matrimony is generally conceded to be the greatest game of chance in the world, and the picking out of a life partner is believed to be attended with about the same degree of certainty as locating the bean in a shell game at a country fair. To a degree this view of the matter is true, but it is only true because both men and women play the game of matrimony with their eyes shut, and their ears stuffed up, and they refuse to take note of the guide posts that are erected along the road to the altar.

In reality matrimony is only a stage of evolution. It develops whatever is best or worst in men's and women's natures. It doesn't give them an entirely new set of characteristics.

Whatever a girl is before marriage, she is going to be after marriage, only a little more so, for marriage is a mordant that sets the color of a woman's nature, and this enables any man to forecast with sufficiently reasonable accuracy the sort of a wife a woman will make from the kind of a girl she is.

Every man, for instance, prays to be delivered from a jealous and nagging wife, but he looks to his guardian angel to preserve him instead of depending on himself.

Up to Him

Yet the matter is absolutely in his own hands, for a hunchback woman could easier conceal her deformity than the green-eyed woman her jealousy. If, therefore, you are engaged to a girl who has fits and hysterics every time you notice another woman, and who can't accept a reasonable explanation of why you should have taken some old woman friend to lunch, or why you walked up the street with some good comrade girl that you work with in the office, why, son, be warned in time. Break off your engagement with that girl before you let yourself in for a life-time of misery.

She will make the sort of wife that will keep you in terror all your days and that you will have to lie to and deceive until you hate her and have a contempt for yourself. She will go through your pockets after you are asleep looking for letters from women, and sniff at your clothes to see if they smell perfume and if there is any poudre de riz on the lapel of your coat, and she'll be forever popping into your office to see what you are doing, and you won't dare to employ a stenographer that is under sixty-five and bald and with false teeth.

Jealousy doesn't develop suddenly, like appendicitis. It's a chronic complaint that is constitutional with some women, and it's an incurable malady. So pass up the maiden who gives unmistakable signs that she is afflicted with it.

Every man, likewise, has a horror of getting a wife who is a domestic tyrant. And well he may, but it is his own fault if he does. Just take a good, long squint at Angelina in her own home, son, and see whether she bosses her own family. If she rules the roost and her mother looks at her before speaking and her little sisters and brothers keep in the background when she is about, duck and run, though you were on the very steps of the altar, unless you feel that you would actually enjoy being henpecked.

Hasn't Got a Show

The girl that can run her own family can run a husband with one hand tied behind her. In marrying her he hasn't even got a show for his white alley, and he will spend the balance of his life eating what she thinks is good for his digestion, going to the church she approves of, visiting her family and friends and wearing the neckties that she picks out.

Every sensible man also desires to avoid marrying a woman who is extravagant and unduly fond of dress. He can blame nothing but his own stupidity if he marries one. Every woman wears a price tag on her clothes that proclaims whether she is a good bargain as a wife or not. When a man deliberately picks out a girl that looks like a living fashion plate, and that he knows is dressed far beyond her means, what right has he to complain if, in time, he grows as humpshouldered trying to pay her bills as her father did? He had his warning, and he refused to take it.

Every man desires a wife who will be companionable and sympathetic and understand the things that he does. Are there not a thousand ways to test out whether a woman is broad and intelligent or narrow brained and prejudiced before you are tied to her for life?

I know one wise youth, a man of heart and soul, who was very much taken with an extremely pretty girl and on the verge of popping the question to her. Fortunately for him, just before he took the fatal step, he invited the girl to go with him to see a play that swept the whole gamut of the finer emotions. The man's heart was wrung with its pathos, and his throat choked with the passion of it, but the girl sat up absolutely untouched and unmoved, her eyes as dry as at a baseball game.

The man took her home and simply dumped her at her front door, and never went near her again. "Why, she is a stick, a stock, a stone," he said to me. "I would rather be dead than married to a woman that couldn't understand a play like that."

True Signs

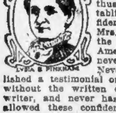
If I were a man I would never marry any woman until I had been on an excursion with her, or on a camping expedition. If I found a girl who could be as entertaining and agreeable at breakfast as she was at dinner; who looked as neat and attractive in her shirt waist and skirt as she did in a ball gown; who could take missing a train, or a rainy day with good-natured philosophy instead of acting as if the misadventure were a personal grievance; if she was cheerful, and helpful, and unselfish, and a good companion and a good fellow under all circumstances, I'd keep on that girl's trail until I persuaded her to marry me. For I would know that I had her number, and that it was a winning one every time.

But if she was peevish, and selfish, and exacting, and didn't know how to do anything, and expected everybody to wait on her, she'd never lure me up to the proposing point, not even if she was as beautiful as Venus, and was stucked up to her neck in gold.

Oh, you don't have to be a prophet, nor the son of a prophet to tell what kind of a wife a girl will make. She carries her sign about with her, if a man will only take the trouble to read it.

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN

Women suffering from any form of illness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established this confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken. Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.



LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

The Dream Divine

BEYOND the wild wrack of her evens,
Earth's mornings I trace;
And back of the individual failure and doom,
Looms the hope of the race.

The race which stands for God and His ways
In the mystery of man,
And that tragic web and woof of his dream and his deed,
Down the centuries' span.

As the close, low view of the valley,
By its walls shut in;
So this cabined vista of life,
With its blindness and sin—

As the wide, vast sweep of the mountainward
Opens that glow;
So the far, vast visions, dim but divine, of the race
That Godward go.

Then sorrow not, doubt not, my Soul!
Nor despair that thy dreams come not true.
They will re-rise and re-build in those hopings, eterne,
Of your children anew.

For the glory of earth is not dead
With the day in the west;
And of all love's far, dim dawnings of hope unborn,
God's latest are best.

The Vanity Box

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

SIR IAN and Lady Hereward, just back in England from a trip to Paris, make a call on their neighbor, Mrs. Forestier. They walk from the ancestral home of the Herewards, Friar's Moat, two miles through the woods to Riding Wood Hall, the home of Mrs. Forestier.

Lady Hereward drops the little gold case which she always carries, and Sir Ian, as he recovers it and returns it to her, recalls that he has never seen the inside of it. Many believe that the "vanity box" contains a secret which Lady Hereward jealously guards.

Sir Ian is forty-one and bronzed with the sun of African campaigns. He resigned his colonelcy when he succeeded to the estate of the Herewards. His beautiful wife is said to be some months older. Despite this fact and that he is said to have experienced a romance with a much younger girl, before his marriage, he is all devotion to his handsome and remarkably preserved wife.

Lady Hereward notices her husband rapt in admiration before a portrait by Sir Joshua Reynolds. It is that of a beautiful young woman. Mrs. Forestier, who enters at that moment, calls attention to the fact that it greatly resembles Teresina Ricardo, to whom Sir Ian was said to be very attentive when he was in India. She follows this up with the startling information that "Terry Ricardo has just landed in England," after years of absence, and that she has planned to pay a surprise visit that very day to her old-time girlhood friend, Millicent Hereward.

Lady Hereward is plainly agitated and Sir Ian appears embarrassed. Lady Hereward decides not to wait at Riding Wood as she had intended, but to return at once with Sir Ian through the woods to Friar's Moat.

Before they leave Mrs. Forestier tells them of the strange conduct of Nora Verney, the dead vicar's daughter, whom Lady Hereward had taken under her wing. Nora has become incensed because Lady Hereward prevented her marriage with "an undesirable man."

As the two leave Riding Wood, Lady Hereward announces that she has some souvenirs to present to tenants and pensioners on the way home.

At a quarter after four a woman in white calls at Friars' Moat and asks for Lady Hereward. The footman says that his mistress is out, but does not like to let her go, although he had received no instructions concerning expected visitors. Usually when Lady Hereward went out, if she wished to see any one who might arrive before she came back, she mentioned the hour of her return, and directed the servants to ask possible callers to wait.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT
By ALICE STUYVESANT

Copyright, 1910, 1911, by Doubleday, Page & Co.

SHE had said nothing of the sort to-day, nevertheless the footman qualified his announcement of her absence. "I believe they intended to come back to tea," he ventured. "They may be back here any minute, now."

"Thank you, but I think I had better not wait," the lady answered, in one of the most beautiful voices the young man had ever heard; a voice which, if she sang, would be a creamy contralto, honey-sweet. "Please give these cards to her ladyship, but say that Mrs. Ricardo had a headache, and sent Miss Ricardo alone, lest Lady Hereward heard they meant to come, and had possibly given up some engagement."

Her Wonderful Eyes

This seemed an almost unnecessarily detailed explanation, but the lady gave it with a certain explicit earnestness which showed that she really wanted it repeated precisely as made. The footman resolved to obey strictly, for this visitor of his mistress was one of those women whom men, in all ranks of life, instinctively long to please.

The servant knew Mrs. Ricardo by name and sight, though she did not come often to Friars' Moat, but he had never heard of a Miss Ricardo. She certainly could not be a daughter who had been away for a long time—as long as his service with the Herewards; for she must be at least twenty-six or seven, and Mrs. Ricardo was not more than thirty-five.

His curiosity was aroused, and he wondered almost painfully who the lady in the white dress and the garden hat could possibly be.

He had never seen such eyes as hers, although his ideal of fine eyes had been turquoise blue ones until this minute, and these eyes were gray, even a greenish gray, when you looked straight into them, though the thick dark lashes on upper and lower lids made them seem dark as shadowed trout pools. Oh, yes, they were eyes that were eyes!

Apart from them, there was perhaps nothing very extraordinary about the dusky oval of the face, yet Richard, the second footman, could fancy himself doing anything for a woman like this. Up to a few minutes ago, he had imagined that he was hopelessly in love with Lady Hereward's companion, Miss Verney, but now he had suddenly recovered from that passion. He could not bear to let Miss Ricardo go.

"Would you like to see Miss Verney, madam?" he asked in desperation, even as he mechanically tendered a little silver tray for visiting-cards.

"Miss Verney?" the lady repeated after him.

"Yes, madam; her ladyship's companion, a daughter of the late vicar at Havershall, a neighboring village. I thought perhaps——"

"No, thank you, I won't trouble Miss Verney, if you will kindly remember to give my message."

The Greeting

What a voice! Richard hoped that he might have the artistic pleasure of hearing it again. As he was assuring the speaker that her message should by no means be forgotten, he caught sight of Sir Ian coming toward the house across the lawn.

One came in that direction if one had taken the short cut to Friars' Moat from Riding Wood. Already Sir Ian had seen the lady's face as she turned from the door to go away, and seeing it, Richard, the footman, fancied that he paused.

Perhaps it was only fancy, though, for after half a second's apparent hesitation, he quickened his steps. The servant thought that he had never seen his master look so soldierly, as he walked briskly forward, head up, shoulders squared.

This settled it, of course. The visitor would not go, now. She had to wait and speak with Sir Ian, who evidently recognized her, and probably she would have to wait until Lady Hereward's return. No doubt that would be soon. It was even a little surprising that she should not be with Sir Ian, but very likely she had gone to the village of Riding St. Mary, to see some of her pensioners.

Just as the footman expected, Miss Ricardo stopped, at sight of Sir Ian, and waited for him to join her. Richard hovered a minute or two at the door, expecting his master to bring the visitor inside, but presently he saw that which convinced him it would be more discreet to retire.

Exactly what convinced him, he could hardly have explained, for really nothing happened which would not happen between any lady and gentleman who met after an absence of some time.

Perhaps it was the way they looked at one another, which banished the servant almost against his will; yet it could hardly have been that, either, for they did not smile, or appear to be particularly pleased to see each other.

Indeed, they were somewhat stiff in their manner; and their voices as they spoke, though quite polite, sounded strained. Nevertheless, the fact remained that Richard the footman felt impelled to efface himself.

It was the lady who spoke first, and held out her hand, saying in her sweet voice which quivered just perceptibly: "How do you do, Sir Ian? I wonder if I've changed so much that you don't remember me?"

"You have changed scarcely at all," he answered; and certainly there was no ring of gladness in his tone. Possibly it hid feeling, rather than expressed it.

They shook hands, and looked in each other's faces, as if half-afraid of what they might see there. Yet there was nothing that either need have feared.

No color showed through the ineradicable Siuth African tan which had permanently bronzed the soldier's face; and the bright rose which stained the cheeks of the young woman made her look far prettier and more youthful than she had done five minutes before. She now appeared to be no more than twenty-five.

For an instant she forgot to draw her hand from Sir Ian's and naturally he could not let it drop, so he held it firmly in his, till it occurred to her that it would be well for her to take it away.

She blushed deeply as she did so, though not in offence; otherwise her gray eyes would not have been so kind, so gentle, as they rested on the man's brown face and seemed to count the silver threads on his temples.

"You have changed," she said, "but only as I have liked to think you would change—with the years. The South African war——"

"Yes, that changed all of us," he caught her up.

"It gave you glory."

"Nonsense!" he exclaimed, then reddened a little. "I beg your pardon," he went on, "but glory is a very big word, and I did no more than almost any other man did. I had some luck, that's all."

"I'm very, very glad that you had luck, and that you were spared to enjoy it," said Miss Ricardo. "It is—pleasant to see you again."

"Thank you," he answered. But he did not return the compliment. A look of hopeless weariness and illness sharpened his face. His shoulders were not squared now. His head drooped. If a man as sunburnt as Sir Ian could turn pale, he was pale.

"Don't Be Unhappy"

Perhaps his abruptness pained her. At all events she moved as if to go. "I'd just left Maud's card and mine for—Milly" (she brought the name out with a slight effort), "when I saw you. I wouldn't have come, as Maud had a headache, but she was sure Mrs. Forestier would have told Milly that she meant to bring me over to-day; and we both thought——"

"Mrs. Forestier did tell us, but only when we were lunching there just now," Sir Ian said quickly, as she paused.

"I was sure you knew, the moment I saw you, for you didn't look a bit surprised."

"I'd got over my surprise."

"Maud thought it would be rather horrid for neither of us to come, if Milly had heard. She might——"

To Be Continued To-morrow

"The Vanity Box" is running serially in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. A liberal instalment of this remarkable mystery novel will be printed in the Sunday AMERICAN

Light at Evening

THE quiet house with the door ajar;
The cup of clear water and fruits that are
In the pool of an ebony table limned;
The two roads march to a twilight rimm'd
By hills and cooled by wafts of sea—
These things were good and dolour-free
To a heart that never a want discloses
But a fountain blue in a mist of roses,
A vine with grapes, and an evening boon
After the shadows and fire of the noon,
With dark hours light as the hours of sheen,
But I knew not, Love, what these things mean
Till you came long-sought through my door one night,
Ate of the fruits as a mortal might,
Drank of the water that glowed as wine,
Then sat and folded your wings divine
Beside the fire with your eyes on mine.

The Lesson a Famous Statue Teaches Us

By THOMAS TAPPER.

UNDOUBTEDLY every reader of this paper is familiar with the statue of the Venus of Milo. No work of ancient art has been more commonly reproduced, in one way and another. From the original in the Museum of the Louvre, at Paris, copies have been made for other museums. It is found alongside the rubber plant and tall lamp in front parlors. And it has not escaped the publicity of being used in advertisements.

The beauty of this statue is so evident that even ordinary men who visit the room in Paris where it stands take off their hats. Many of these same men let a woman stand in a street car without feeling unhappy about it. This shows how impressive a piece of marble is when a great man has carved it, and how unimpressive human life often is, carved by the Creator.

The fame of this statue has even inspired the writer of funny paragraphs, who makes a Chicago lady order a copy of the statue in Europe and on her return to America sue the express company for delivering it in an imperfect condition. She gets damages. This story was probably written by an Englishman who dislikes America, or by a New York man who has a grudge against Chicago.

Again, the funny man makes the lady of the house lead in the colored mammy from the kitchen to view the recently acquired Venus, erected in the parlor. Mammy exclaims: "Land's sakes, missis, nakedness ain't no treat to me." And mammy touches upon a matter that the pure in heart have not neglected. Some of these have insisted that Venus—if standing in a public place—should be draped either with a shirt waist or the American flag.

I think it was Mr. Philip Hale, of Boston, who once said: "To the pure in heart all things are objectionable."

Meanwhile Venus stands in her serene dignity, and would, if she could, smile at us.

II.

This statue was discovered in 1820 on the island of Melos. It probably belongs to the fourth century.

The busiest man in the world can, if he wants to, remember a few facts about this famous lady. Here they are:

The statue is not carved from one block. The upper part is of finer marble than the drapery.

Perhaps something stood beside the figure. One writer suggests a column about as high as the shoulder on which the left arm rested. Another suggests that the left arm rested on a shield. The right hand undoubtedly held up the drapery.

Two thoughts are suggested to us by this statue that are not talked of enough.

The first is this: The sculptor undoubtedly modeled the statue after a living woman. She was no doubt a Greek. She had a father and a mother, lived her life like other women, probably married and raised her little flock of children; walked in the sunlight of the East among the olive trees, and, like every other woman who is truly alive, loved the air, the sky, the clouds, and the restless water of the Aegean Sea.

She is, then, a type of a living individual; a type of a woman that is among us. For all we know, her descendants may be found to-day in the land that gave her birth. A great artist goes to nature and life about him for his inspiration, hence it is reasonable to suppose that this woman once roamed the fields and sang her happiness.

The second suggestion is this: The Greek girl or woman who inspired the sculptor to produce a goddess is made to show her higher nature. We do not think of this enough. It may not be the lot of many women to inspire an artist to produce a marble goddess, but it is not denied to any woman, whether she be of heroic size or not, to possess all the qualities that are supposed to belong to a goddess. With these qualities in evidence she may not inspire a sculptor, but she is sure to inspire somebody else.

It is curious that we think higher possibilities of a great statue than we think of the woman of to-day. The statue was once alive, and had to meet the troubles and inconveniences of her time; even perhaps to standing in the street car of those days while the Greek men wrapped their togas about them and sat complacently reading the news.

If we are inclined to have one more fact, it will not burden us:

A great artist strives to emphasize the higher human qualities. Thereby he makes it plain that he recognizes them. Now, higher qualities can be found in all of us, and the question arises:

Would it not pay us to know enough about life from the point of view of the artist, to understand ourselves?

We are, all of us, more or less damaged statues of gods and goddesses.

What Can This Remarkable Man See In Your Life?

Says That Your Possibilities and the Workings of Your Mind are Like an Open Book to Him and Those Who Understand His Simple, Yet Wonderful System.

Reveals Your Weak Points, Strong Characteristics, Future Possibilities, What You are Best Fitted for in Life, and Dormant Tendencies, as though Gifted with Some Mighty, Intangible Faculty.

Write Him a Letter—See What He Says. He May Be the Means of Making Clear Your Pathway to Success in Life.

It may seem strange, but here is a man who has a remarkable system by means of which success, prosperity and advancement may be gained either in business, society, or home and love affairs. He says that it is all very simple when you understand it and that we are living in an age when remarkable achievements must be expected; that the great air pilots and scientists of our time are doing things that almost carry one back to the days of great miracles. He says that a lot of us, often unknowingly, lay bare the inner workings of the mind to a great extent every time we write a few words; that our minds govern and control the nervous system and as the nerves control the action of the muscles, we reveal through all muscular action what is in our minds to a wonderful degree. Therefore, when you write a letter, the nerves and muscles of the hand and arm make peculiar jerks, twists, angles and flourishes which cause peculiar formations in the letters, that speak a language all their own, and to one who understands the method of reading and applying these records of the workings of the mind, the character, tendencies and future possibilities of the writer are like an open book. Professor Hackett is a new phenomenon who has jumped into prominence by his system of making men and women more intelligent, powerful, magnetic and successful in life. He has traveled extensively over the world, living in Egypt, the Orient and China, and has made a careful study among the temples and abiding places of the philosophies of the Ancient Egyptians, Zoroaster and Confucius. He says he can tell from a specimen of anyone's handwriting what the writer's leading characteristics are, what the writer is best fitted for in life and can reveal the weak and strong points of the writer as though gifted with some mighty, unknown faculty. He would like every man and woman, young and old, to write him the following four lines and send same to him for examination and future reference. He says that he can startle and amaze anyone who writes him and will send to those who do so a large sample "Chart of Nature" illustrating the wonders and possibilities of his great system, absolutely free. Copy this verse and mail it to him to-day.

I wish to know my strong points,
My weak characteristics too,
I also wish more success in life,
That's why I'm writing to you!

Also write your name and address, state if married or single and you will be delighted with what Prof. Hackett tells you. Kindly enclose two (2) cent stamps to help pay postage on the sample "Chart of Nature" and handling of your letter. Send now. Don't delay. Address Prof. J. C. Hackett, 640 West 43d St., Dept. 320, New York, N. Y.

Every manufacturer in New England, every banker, every lawyer, every student of economics, every one who takes an interest in the problems of the times, will do well to read in next Sunday's AMERICAN an interview which Mr. C. O'Connell Galvin, the AMERICAN'S special commissioner to Ireland, had in the House of Commons with Sir Alfred Mond, M.P., head of the Cobden Club, who, answering Mr. Galvin's question, "Why do the English people continue to support free trade?" gives some facts and reasons of the highest interest and import.

YOUR LOVER CLAUDE IS BOUND IN THAT BURNING BALE AND HE IS DOOMED HA, HA
I DEFY YOU DESMOND
I'LL NEVER MARRY YOU DESMOND. I LOVE ONLY CLAUDE
DON'T STOP FOR THAT RAFT, MATES. ITS ONLY A BURNING BALE OF HAY
SOMETHING HAS EX-TINGUISHED THE RAGING FLAMES
SAVED! ITS A CATTLE BOAT. NOW TO YELL FOR HELP!
THE CREW HEARD MY CRY OF DISTRESS. THEY LOANED ME THIS HORSE. NOW DESMOND UNHAND MY ROSAMOND!
LOTS OF SPEED CURSES! CLAUDE LIVES, CURSES!
MY HERO CLAUDE. HE WILL SAVE ME
SO YOU REFUSE TO MARRY ME, EH, PROUD ROSAMOND. YOU WILL BE DEVOURED BEFORE YOUR CLAUDE ARRIVES.
YOU CUR
CHESFIELD

It is a terrible thing to see those we love in danger, and Rosamond's heart is breaking as she watches Claude drift seaward on a burning bale of hay. Nevertheless, she defies the villain Desmond and vows she will remain true to her lover or to his memory if he should not be saved. The villain laughs cruelly as he gloats over the terrible death in store for his rival. Desmond is utterly heartless.

The keen eyes of sailors aboard a steamship have noticed the floating bale of hay on the water, and the vessel is headed for it. But just as it seems that Claude must be saved, the captain decides that a bale of hay, and a burning one at that, is not worth picking up. The unfortunate Claude is now doomed. When hope is aroused in vain, despair comes blacker than before.

What happens? Hidden in his suffocating prison, Claude feels the fury of the flames die out. He does not know the cause of the relief, but by looking at the picture we see that the wave created by the bow of the steamship has splashed over the burning hay and extinguished the fire which threatened Claude. This shows anew that the onlooker sees most of the game.

As the ship sweeps by the raft and the bale of hay in which our hero is bound, all seems lost once more. But the horses aboard are hungry, and, spying the hay, they reach their heads through the portholes and seize it. Naturally this attracts the attention of the attendants, and they soon discover Claude and take him aboard the ship, where he is kindly treated.

Claude is given one of the horses which accidentally saved his life, and he starts with it for the short swim ashore. Desmond, who had been watching for the death of Claude, sees his prey escape, and with yells of baffled rage flees with Rosamond. He is aided by Gorgol, his chief Wild Man since Gamgola went over to the side of right. Rosamond still trusts in Claude.

"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond, in ghoulish glee as he watches the helpless Rosamond slide down the wire toward certain death. If she escapes the alligator she will be dashed to pieces against the wall! Neither her youth nor her beauty affects the black heart of Desmond. If ever there was a contemptible villain, he is one. The wall is there; the alligator's jaws are open. Oh, for tomorrow's pictures!

The Manicure Lady

Ier Brother Wilfred Very Nearly Loses His Poetic Hand

"WILFRED'S hand is getting better," said the Manicure Lady. "The poor boob burned it on the Fourth of July, and when the doctor told him that it might be months before it got better the boy burst into the first honest tears I have seen him shed since the time the old gent turned him down for his room rent a month ago. You see, George, he was afraid if his right hand was disabled he wouldn't be able to write any sonnets any more."

"The world wouldn't be any loser," said the Head Barber.

"There you go hammering again," sneered the Manicure Lady. "You might as well ask a leopard to change his clothes as to ask a barber to appreciate poetry. Anyhow, George, the poor boy is all broke up. The old gent ain't got a bit of pity in the world for him, at that. He says that Wilfred feels worse to think his burnt fingers won't let him make a touch than to think they won't let him write poetry.

"Wilfred could come back at the old gent very hard if he wanted to. The Fourth of July created more havoc with father than it did with brother. An exploding firecracker only burns the fingers, while the celebration that father had, lasting three whole days, sears the soul, as John B. Gough used to say."

"Is your father drinking again?" the Head Barber wanted to know.

Not Again, Yet

"No," replied the Manicure Lady, "Not again. Yet. Honest to goodness, George, you don't know what a daughter's feelings is. After the old dad staying off the stuff for almost a fortnight, what does he do but meet up with some old lumberjack friends of his that used to work with him in the pine woods around Saginaw, Mich., and that has since got to be wealthy.

"He had the three of them up to the house in one bunch the other night, the evening of the Fourth, and between the extreme heat and the other unfavorable conditions it was probably the most impossible quartet ever seen outside a barber shop."

"I don't see any reason why the old dogs shouldn't have their little fling," said the Head Barber. "I always figured that after a man has made his pile and is on the shady side of sixty he has a right to liquor up a little."

The Poor Sideboard

"But you never seen these lumberjacks, George," said the Manicure Lady. "Talk about your hard rock men! My goodness! They made our sideboard look like a nice dry spot on the Sarah Desert, or like a raft full of shipwrecked mariners the seventh day out. There wasn't enough left to drink to entertain Billy Sunday and John L. Sullivan.

"Wilfred was at his best that night, George. He wrote a poem called 'The Dying Swamper,' and it made such a hit with the old lumberjacks that they insisted on him writing more. Then he wrote a poem called 'The Pine is Gone from Michigan but Still My Heart Lies There.' Talk about making a bit! Say, that boy could have had anything them old roughnecks owned, and I guess he did do pretty well, because I seen him nicking the richest one of the three for a twenty just as they was having one of our last decanters together. He paid me back the two he got off me the other day, so I ain't knocking my brother.

"But to get back to the old gent. He kept it up and is keeping it up yet. No wonder mother doesn't like legal holidays. She says a legal holiday is the best alibi that father ever had."

HIS AMBITION.

"Is he ambitious?"

"Very. He wants some day to get a job that will give him good pay and let him go to the ball game every day."

FRECKLE-FACE

New Remedy That Removes Freckles or Costs Nothing

Here's chance, Miss Freckle-Face, to try a new remedy for freckles, with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles, while if it does give you a clear complexion, the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength, from Houghton & Dutton's or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co., and one night's treatment will show you how easy it is to rid yourself forever of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask Houghton & Dutton or Riker-Jaynes Drug Co. for the double-strength othine, as this is the only prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

The Gun Runner

Synopsis of First Instalment

GUSTAV LINGG, wireless operator on the Laminian, goes ashore while his ship is loading at her New York dock and loses his way in a dense fog which comes in from the harbor and envelopes the city. On a side street he meets a beautiful girl whom he has never seen before, but who calls him by name. "I want to talk to you," she says, "I must talk to you—alone."

Overcome by shyness, he stares boobishly at her for a moment and then turns and flees.

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

HE knew that the woman had not followed him. But all that afternoon he wandered and tarried and walked about with the feeling that he was not alone.

He kept looking over his shoulder from time to time, pondering some wordless yet persistent sense of disquiet. He felt as though he were being shadowed. He could not shake off the impression that some vague figure or two was guardedly dogging his footsteps.

This sense of being shadowed grew stronger as night came on. It made him doubly anxious to get back to his ship, to know the security of his bald, little, white-painted cabin.

It caused him to reiterate to himself the engineer's morose dictum that the city was not to be trusted. He had hungered for the unexpected; he had been restless for his emprising hour or two on land. But this, he muttered to himself, was the kind of night that took all the curl out of Romance.

He was not worthy of the venture. He was better suited to the quietness of a ship's cabin. He disliked the thought of the two pacing shadows that seemed to be following him through the fog. He wanted the Laminian's dirty foredeck once more under his feet.

Hurried Through Fog

He designedly kept out of all danger zones, to make security doubly sure. A thick-voiced man with a black muffler about his throat had trailed after him to demand if he had no old clothes to dispose of. But he did not as much as stop to answer.

A stranger in a Stetson hat, still later, caught companionably at his arm and implored him to drink with him. But he freed himself sharply and kept on his way. A figure or two blocked his path ominously, but he skirted them, as a careful pilot skirts his channel-buoys. He did not care to run risks. He felt that he was still in the land of the enemy.

He kept to the open, blindly and doggedly. He knew but one goal, and that goal lay beyond the Laminian's odorous gangplank. He fought his devious way towards it like the spawning sock-eye fighting its way to a river source.

He hurried along the fog-wrapt canons, still haunted by the impression of some unknown figure dogging his steps. He felt, as night and the fog deepened together, that the city was nothing more than a many-channeled river-bed, and that he waded along its bottom, breathing a new element, too thick for air, too etherealized for water.

He saw streets that were new to him, streets where the misted globes of electric lights became an undulating double row of white tulips. Then he stumbled into Broadway. But it was a Broadway with the soft pedal on. Its roar of sound was so muffled he scarcely knew it.

Then he came to a square where the scattered lampglobes looked like bubbles of gold caught in tree branches. Under these tree branches he saw loungers on benches, mysterious and motionless figures, like broken rows of statuary, sleeping men in the final and casual attitudes of death. Above these figures he could see wet maple leaves, hanging as still and lifeless as though they had been stencilled from sheets of green copper. His eyes fell on floating street signs, blurs of colored electrics cut off from the invisible walls which backed them.

Nearing the River

He caught glimpses of the softened bulbs of automatic signs, like moving goldfish seen through frosted glass. Then he saw more lights, serried lights, subdued into balloons of misty pearl.

They threaded the facade of some gigantic hotel, like jewel strings about the throat of a barbaric woman. But he could not remember the place.

And again he foundered on toward the water-front, disquieted with vague and foolish thoughts, as much oppressed by the orderly streets as though he were escaping from some sea-worn harbor slum of vice and outlawry. He still wanted his cabin, as a long-harried chipmunk wants its tree-hole.

He was well out of it, he told himself reassuringly, though he still kept wondering why the woman had stopped him. He remembered details of her dress, the sense of assurance and well-being in her mere figure poise, the open way in which her eyes had met his.

He began to wonder why he had lacked the audacity to respond to that clear challenge of fate. He demanded of himself why he had run away from the very thing he had been seeking.

He knew, as the growl of the ferry-whistles grew louder, that he was nearing the river. He felt as ungainly as a tortoise scuffling back to its water-edge of escape, but his confidence began to return to him as he found himself nearer and nearer his brink of delivery.

He could perceive the ridiculous figure he had cut. He could even realise that he had defeated his own ends. He was conscious of a growing overtone of discontent, a peevish resentment against his own white-livered irresolution.

And he would go aboard and the next day be out at sea, with the mystery of it all still unanswered.

He strode on through the fog. It was not until he came to a narrow street-crossing between two blank-windowed warehouses that he saw his way obstructed.

But he noticed as he came to a sudden stop that his path was barred by a cab with an open door. It blocked the crossing, very much as a Neapolitan "corricolo" maneuvres for a fare by cutting across a pedestrian's path.

The Woman in the Cab.

The youth drew up and peered in through that door, with a slightly quickened pulse, wondering why the impassive figure on the box should be thus blocking his way.

Then he saw that the cab was not empty. Leaning quietly forward from the seat was an intent and waiting figure—a woman's figure. It was the woman from whom he had so ignominiously fled.

He felt, this time, no horripilating tingle of shock. His fund of wonder seemed to be exhausted.

He stood staring at her, almost abstractedly, with the mild and resigned bewilderment of a man who has seen lightning strike twice in the same spot.

"Quick!" said the woman, with an almost imperious movement of her gloved hand.

"What?" asked Lingg, inadequately, irrelevantly.

"I wanted to warn you," the woman whispered, as she moved back on the cab seat, obviously to make room for him. "I must warn you—but not here."

"Of what?" asked Lingg. He saw that she was quite alone in the cab.

"Come!" she commanded, ignoring his question.

He stepped into the hooded gloom like a coerced schoolboy. He was not afraid he assured himself. It was merely that he was unwilling to be made the blind tool of forces he could not comprehend.

"Of what?" he repeated, noticing that the cab moved forward the moment the door had slammed shut.

"Not to sail on the Laminian," said the woman at his side. He could detect a subtle perfume about her presence, a flowery and effeminising perfume which made him think of New England village gardens. An older man would have thought of boudoirs.

Good Way to Make Patterns Fit

THE girl who can embroider but cannot draw is often at a loss with a pattern that does not fit her material in size. Sometimes it is too large, again too small, and to reduce or enlarge the original design the material must be sent to a designer.

By means of squares any embroiderer should be able to do this work herself with a little practice. Trace the pattern to be changed on checked paper or draw squares on the pattern itself. Then on a second piece of paper draw other squares smaller or larger, as the pattern is to be decreased or enlarged.

To make it plainer: If you draw over your original pattern squares measuring an inch to a side, and you wish to reduce your design a third, on the second sheet the squares should measure three-quarters of an inch. To enlarge it by the same amount the new squares measure an inch and a quarter.

Now, follow on the second sheet, square by square, the lines of the design, extending or contracting them as the pattern is to be enlarged or reduced.

This work can be done directly on the material, but it is much safer to change the pattern in paper and transfer in your usual method.

Sometimes a pattern must be elongated, while the width remains the same. This is often necessary for braiding designs and other conventional patterns. Again squares are used, but on the second sheet the height of the squares is made the same, while the top and bottom lines are made half again as long as they are originally, and the pattern is expanded. To contract it these vertical lines are brought closer together by a third or a half, and the design is compressed, when the pattern is drawn line by line.

Slight practice with any conventional pattern will show better how this is done than by the most explicit directions.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TELL HIM THE TRUTH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

A short time ago, I met a young man who became deeply infatuated with me, and since that time we have corresponded almost daily. In his letters, he assures me that I am the sole possessor of his love.

Of late, he has become very serious, and as I do not feel much love for him, I would ask you to tell me what to do in this case.

I know he would feel hurt should I tell him the truth. My age is eighteen.

PERPLEXED.

I AM afraid you will have to explain to him your position in the matter, because you should no longer lead him to believe that his attentions are acceptable to you.

As he has asked you to tell him the truth, explain to him that, although your friendship is perfectly sincere, you do not love him and, therefore, cannot feel it right to marry him.

He will understand that you could not be happy together and will respect you far more if you are frank with him.

WIN HER FATHER OVER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping company with a young lady for the last five years and we have loved each other.

Her father objected to my keeping company with her. He gives no reason.

A few weeks ago she asked me to write him a letter and this I did, asking if he would give his consent.

Now he refuses to let me see her at all. This has made us both unhappy. She has already promised to become my wife.

What would you advise me to do in this matter?

E. B.

YOU like each other; therefore, ultimately no obstacle can prevent the fulfillment of your hopes.

In the meantime, carry out earnestly all that the father requires, never wavering, but believing firmly that this will bring you nearer the object of your ambition.

The father, watching his daughter, will realize how much she likes you, even though she does not see or hear from you; and he will know that the happiness of her life depends upon you.

We Will Prove at Our Own Expense That It Is No Longer Necessary to Be Thin, Scrawny, and Undeveloped.

"Gee! Look at that pair of skinny scarecrows! Why don't they try Sargol?"

This is a generous offer to every thin man or woman in Boston and vicinity. We positively guarantee to increase your weight to your own satisfaction or no pay. Think this over—think what it means. At our own risk we offer to put 10, 15, yes, 30 pounds of good, solid "stay there" flesh on your bones, to fill out hollows in cheeks, neck or bust, to get rid of that "peaked" look, to rejuvenate and revitalize your whole body until it tingles with vibrant energy; to do this without drastic diet, "tonics," severe physical culture "stunts," detention from business or any irksome requirements—if we fail it costs you nothing.

We particularly wish to hear from the excessively thin, those who know the humiliation and embarrassment which only skinny people have to suffer in silence. We want to send a free 50-cent package of our new discovery to the people who are called "slats" and "bean poles," to bony women, whose clothes never look "anyhow," no matter how expensively dressed, to the skinny men who fail to gain social or business recognition on account of their starved appearance. We care not whether you have been thin from birth, whether you have lost flesh through sickness, how many flesh builders you have experimented with. We take the risk and assume it cheerfully. If we cannot put pounds and pounds of healthy flesh on your frame we don't want your money.

The new treatment increases the red corpuscles in the blood, strengthens the nerves and puts the digestive tract into such shape that your food is assimilated and turned into good, solid, healthy flesh instead of passing through the system undigested and unassimilated. It is a thoroughly scientific principle, this Sargol, and builds up the thin, weak and debilitated without any nauseous dosing. In many conditions it is better than cod liver oil and certainly is much pleasanter to take.

Send for the 50-cent box to-day. Convince us by your prompt acceptance of this offer that you are writing in good faith and really desire to gain in weight. The 50-cent package which we will send you free will be an eye-opener to you. We send it that you may see the simple, harmless nature of our new discovery, how easy it is to take, how you gain flesh privately without knowledge of friends or family until you astonish them by the resultant and unmistakable results.

We could not publish this offer in the American if we were not prepared to live up to it. It is only the astounding results of our new method of treatment that make such an offer and such a guarantee possible on our part. So cut off the coupon to-day and mail it at once to The Sargol Company, 43-G Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., and please inclose 10c with your letter to help pay distribution expenses. Take our word, you'll never regret it.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

No one asks why "Ice" is going up.

$ $ $

Atchison stock showed every indication that the insiders were satisfied with crop conditions along the line. Union Pacific officials are content with the outlook in their territory.

$ $ $

It is unofficially stated that the Steel Trust is operating about seventy-three per cent. of capacity of all its mills. These figures, taken in connection with the organization of the International Steel & Iron Institute at Brussels, put Steel shares in a very strong market position.

$ $ $

The important thing about the crop report, from a speculative point of view, is that by justifying the crop scare of last week it will make the public take other crop scares more seriously, and it will be surprising if there are not some in July and August. The big scare of last year came at the end of July.

$ $ $

However full the crop report may be of ammunition for the bear party, a broad view of it compels the conclusion that it is bullish on the stock market because its figures, taken in connection with the improved weather conditions since they were gathered, insure larger tonnage for the railroads than they had last year.

$ $ $

The good weather of July has not helped oats or hay, which have suffered a real disaster. Hay is selling at $25 to $30 a ton in the country. Because hay is not dealt in on the exchanges to any extent, the public forgets that it is equal in value to the cotton crop. The cotton crop this year promises to be the greatest on record, present conditions indicating something like 15,000,000 bales.

$ $ $

Buying on the decline is better than selling, because it is well known that weather conditions have improved so materially since the government gathered its information that a larger average of all crops han for the previous year is assured. With reciprocity Canada will become part of the United States for crop purposes, and Canada is raising a record breaking crops than for the previous year is assured, that from the surplus of both countries there will be more than 850,000,000 bushels for export. Under the reciprocity arrangement a greater proportion of this than usual will pass over the railroads of the United States, and that means larger earnings, especially for the railroads of the Northwest.

$ $ $

It has been a long time since a rumor of an increase in the Brooklyn Rapid Transit dividend has made any headway. Stockholders seem to have reconciled themselves to the fact that the company is now paying out all that it can afford to. In the fiscal year which ended with June 30 last gross earnings are understood to have increased by $970,000, while the increased efficiency under which the system is now being operated enabled the management to carry part of this gain forward to net earnings. In spite of this, it is not expected that the annual report will show more than 6 per cent. for the stock, or a margin of 1 per cent. at best over the dividend requirements. Last year the system earned 5.7 per cent.

$ $ $

The bond market is quiet with prices firm. Ten days have elapsed since investors received checks for about $250,000,000 in dividends and interest, but the July reinvestment demand which has been expected for nearly a month has not appeared. If it does not come by the middle of the month, the market for bonds is likely to remain quiet until the vacation season is over, which will be about September 1. There is no basic reason why there should not be a good demand for bonds except that the recent heavy offerings of high grade issues have absorbed all the money awaiting investment in bonds. The outlook for easy money still continues.

$ $ $

A novel device intended to increase the attractiveness of an issue of $2,200,000 ten-year six per cent. notes which have been offered to stockholders of the American Power & Light Company is an issue of what the company calls option warrants. With each $100 of the notes a warrant will be given entitling the holder to buy a share of the company's common stock at par at any time within ten years. The notes and warrants are issued separately, so that subscribers can sell their notes and hold the warrants against the possibility of a considerable advance in the price of the stock, or hold the notes and dispose of the warrants if a subsequent increase in the value of the company's stock gives them a market. The common stock, which is not paying dividends, is selling now at around 75.

$ $ $

A fair demand prevails for short term notes, although it is not as good as it has been. Notes yielding a low return on the investment are a little weaker, but those paying 5 or 6 per cent. on the cost are strong. There is very little demand, however, for notes like those of the National Railroad of Mexico and the International Great Northern.

STOCK MARKET BECOMES DULL

NEW YORK, July 11.—A strong tone was displayed in the opening of the stock exchange to-day and in the early trading almost every security on the list made some price gain. The Western railroad stocks were the most conspicuous features. Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and St. Paul advanced more than ½ point each in early transactions. The industrials were neglected in the early trading, although both Steel common and Amalgamated Copper made slight gains.

After the first few minutes of trading the leading railroad issues eased off somewhat and trading in the rest of the list became very dull.

Among the opening prices were the following advances: Steel common, ⅛; Amalgamated Copper, ⅛; Reading, ⅜; Erie common, ⅛; Union Pacific, ⅜; Southern Pacific, ⅛; B. R. T., ⅛; B. & O., ⅛; Atchison, ⅛.

In the London market American securities reflected cheerful sentiment and ruled above the New York parity. The Curb market opened steady, with Standard Oil quoted at 640 bid and 645 asked and American Tobacco 396 bid, 400 asked.

TRAIN ALL SLEEPERS, DUE HERE AT 7 TO-DAY

The Federal Express left Washington at 5:35 o'clock last night and was transferred around New York by ferry, landing at Harlem River at 1:30 o'clock. The train was on schedule time at Bridgeport. The train was made up of vestibuled sleeping cars from Washington to Boston, and Philadelphia to Boston and a coach from Washington to Boston. It was due at the South Station at 7 o'clock this morning.

KING PRAISES IRISH SOLDIERS

DUBLIN, July 11.—The hearts of Ireland's fighting men were won to-day by King George at Phoenix, where he reviewed the Garrison and felicitated the several regiments, to whom he presented new colors. As the King left the troops were allowed to break ranks and the monarch was cheered until he passed from sight.

BODY OF MALDEN YOUTH RECOVERED

WENHAM, July 11.—The body of John Towns, a twenty-two-year-old Malden youth, who was drowned in Idlewood Lake, near this town, was recovered today. Towns and a party of friends were camping here. Yesterday the boy complained of the excessive heat. He left the lake and was not again seen alive. Chief of Police Knowlton of Wenham and a squad of police recovered the body.

GIRLS IN STOKES CASE HELD FOR JURY

NEW YORK, July 11.—Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad, who recently shot W. E. D. Stokes, millionaire proprietor of the Hotel Ansonia, were held for the grand jury to-day by Magistrate Freschi without bail on the charge of attempted murder.

Boston starts off to-day as the hottest city in the United States, and the clang of ambulances carrying the dead and prostrated to the morgue and hospitals told again the terrible story that the heat wave remains unbroken.

Thunder storms are promised for to-night. Cooler weather is definitely promised by the Weather Bureau for to-morrow. The heat wave covers the entire United States, with Boston again in first place.

At 8 a. m. to-day the temperature on top of the postoffice building—the official temperature—was 87. In New York it was only 78 at that hour, in Galveston it was only 82, in Washington 82, and in St. Louis 80. On the streets of Boston the mercury stood early in the morning in the 90s, and at 11 o'clock the official temperature was 96.

Boston has never known such a disastrous and continued hot spell as it is now experiencing. Business is practically at a standstill. People carry on their business by telephone. Fortunate professional men join their families at the beach.

The physicians and nurses at the hospitals are among the hardest working people in Boston to-day. The constant stream of prostrated persons of the past week, has nearly worn them out and more than once have tired out doctors themselves fallen from heat and exhaustion.

In Malden and Melrose to-day factories were closed owing to the intense heat. Employes were ordered to report for work again to-morrow morning. No prostrations were reported at the factories, which employ about 4,500 hands. Last week from half a dozen to twenty-five prostrations occurred almost daily at the plants.

The largest factory to close was the Boston Rubber Shoe Company, employing about 2,500 men and women, with factories in Malden and Melrose. They were the first to close and other factories promptly followed suit. City work in both places was suspended, together with practically all out-of-door work.

To-day's wind was a light one from the southwest and brought no relief from the hot sun. To-morrow the wind is to be from the west, and this is not very good news. The east wind, which yesterday reduced the temperature in one hour nine degrees, is lost somewhere.

Thousands of people in Boston to-day declared that they felt the heat yesterday and to-day more than the hotter days of last week. This is directly due to the continuance of the hot wave, which is literally wearing people down.

Boston yesterday experienced the hottest July 10 in thirty-one years. This city was also the hottest place in the United States. On account of Boston's northerly location the weather experts declare this is remarkable.

Restaurants are losing thousands of dollars on account of the heat. This money is going to the soda fountains and lunch rooms where the crackers-and-milk diet is served.

From noon Saturday until 6 p. m. yesterday there were fifty-one deaths in Boston due to the heat. This far exceeds any known records.

GEORGE V. RENEWS FATHER'S PLEDGE TO AID IRELAND

I tender you all my thanks for the affectionate welcome you have given to the Queen and myself. I notice with filial pride and pleasure that in almost every one of your addresses reference is made to the deep affection my father entertained for your country and to the influence he exerted to secure its advancement and prosperity. It is my desire, I do assure you, to follow in my father's footsteps in the same direction and to do everything that lies within my power to promote the happiness and general well-being of the Irish people. I pray that God's blessing may attend all of you in your laborious efforts for the health and happiness of Ireland.—King George in reply to addresses at Dublin.

"MARY JANE'S PA" AT CASTLE SQUARE A FINE SUMMER ATTRACTION

"Mary Jane's Pa" at the Castle Square, with Donald Meek taking the part of "Pa Perkins" and Henrietta McDannel as "Mary Jane," is a delightfully breezy midsummer attraction.

A genuine comedy, it contains just enough heart-interest to grip and hold one's attention, while at the same time creating such an air of light merriment that one unconsciously forgets the cares and worries that make life unbearable when the thermometer is hovering around the 100 mark.

Hiram Perkins, the central figure in the play, is one of the most original characters imaginable. After an absence o many years he returns home, in the first act, to find that his wife has become the owner and publisher of the village newspaper. The only place for him in the home is that of a sort of "maid-of-all-work." His wife offers him the position at a wage of $10 a month, and he snaps up the offer.

"Mary Jane's Pa," as played by Donald Meek, is a very likable fellow despite his evident shortcomings. The spontaneous wit, unfailing good nature, genial disposition and nervous energy thrown around the part by Mr. Meek stamps it as his best piece of character portrayal in this city. The eventful redemption of "Hiram Perkins," in particular is one of the strongest features in the whole play.

Henrietta McDannel as "Mary Jane" also deserves especial mention for the success scored by the production. Her interpretation of the part is sweetly feminine, notwithstanding the fact that boy characters has been her forte in the past.

Mabel Colcord made a powerful Portia Perkins, and the other members of the John Craig company, as usual, played their respective parts in a very creditable manner. The scenic effects of the production are excellent, noticeably the printing office scene, where the appurtenances and atmosphere of a typical country job shop and newspaper office are reproduced true to life.

Keith's Theatre.

A delightfully variegated program calculated to make one forget all the discomforts of torrid weather was presented at B. F. Keith's Theatre last night, the bill being composed of delightful musical numbers, dancing and comedy acts.

A witty little sketch by George Ade, entitled "The Mayor and the Manicure," sparkling with clever dialogue and rapid-fire repartee, provoked much merriment. Edwin Holt admirably portrayed the grouchy old Mayor, and was well supported by Mattie Choate, Josephine Guthrie and E. B. McGuiness.

A delightful hodge-podge of musical nonsense was presented by Bert Fitzgibbon, "the crazy singer of crazy songs," who was released only after half a dozen encores.

Bostonians were particularly interested in Ethel MacDonough, better known, perhaps, as the "Divine Myrma," who fully lived up to her name, and who, it will be remembered, has appeared before as a drummer in the Fadette's Orchestra. Her versatility as a singer and drummer, together with her appropriate suggestions for hot weather comfort, won her an immediate place in the heart of the audience.

"The Meistersingers," who have been delighting music-lovers for the past three weeks, were again in evidence, specializing this week on Irish folk songs. Solos by Arthur Cole, A. Cameron Steele, Harold Tripp and an Irish dance by Nellie Elliott were the leading features.

Another musical number, of a somewhat different sort, but equally delightful in its way, was that presented by the Majestic Musical Four, whose brass quartet work and particularly the "Fox Hunt Overture" brought them many rounds of well earned applause.

Essentially the most original act, however, was the rapid-fire picture painting of Rem Brandt, who by means of an airgun charged with various colors produced portraits of celebrated characters. Felix Patty and Desperado went through a most sensational "upside down" stunt, and the Field Brothers presented something new in double stepping and blackface comedy.

Provincetown Trips.

Those who desire to witness the maneuvers of the great North Atlantic fleet off Cape Cod can do so from the summit of the great Pilgrim Memorial Monument at Provincetown. The monument stands 350 feet above tide water and from its top, readily reached by an inclined way, there is an unobstructed view of ocean and bay. The new steamship on the Provincetown route, the Dorothy Bradford, is taking hundreds of people every day. She leaves No. 400 Atlantic avenue daily at 9, and one has an hour and a half to visit the Monument and see the fleet before taking the boat for the return trip. If the fleet chances to be anchored in the harbor, which often happens, there is an opportunity to visit the battleships.

Majestic Theatre.

The engagement of "Zaza" at the Majestic Theatre, which was abruptly suspended last week on account of the heat, was resumed yesterday under conditions that were nearly as uncomfortable as those when the theatre was closed. Miss Eleanor Gordon played the title role with a great deal of brilliancy, while Mr. Melrose left nothing to be desired in his interpretation of M. Dufrene.

Norumbega Park.

One of the best vaudeville bills of the season was shown for the first time at Norumbega Park yesterday. The most attractive number was supplied by La Petite Emilie Bicycle Troupe, and it surely earned the tremendous applause it received. A half dozen other features were included in the bill.

Paragon Park.

Manager Dodge of Paragon Park discovered that no matter how many additions he makes to the Palm Garden there are still enough patrons to more than fill the tables. The many novel features that attract visitors to Paragon Park have been drawing heavy patronage this season.

New Palace Theatre.

The Summer schedule of the New Palace Theatre is just the kind to make hot weather amusement worth while. New pictures are shown twice each week, and a corps of excellent singers take good care of the musical side of the entertainment.

Globe Theatre.

Another lively vaudeville bill was presented at the Globe Theatre yesterday, with the Aerial MacGinleys as the headliners. This act is one of the most astonishing and daring on the vaudeville stage. Other entertainers were Blamphin and Hehr, Dow and Lavan, and the Kimball Brothers, who contributed an instrumental novelty.

Bass Point.

The trips to Bass Point and Nahant give one not only an opportunity for a delightful sail across the bay, but a splendid chance to visit the new ocean pier at Revere Beach. Attendance records are being broken at Nahant and Bass Point this season.

Scenic Temple.

The Summer schedule of pictures and vaudeville at the Scenic Temple is attracting large audiences. The new bill yesterday was unusually attractive.

Hub Theatre.

The hit in the new program at the Hub Theatre yesterday was LeBarron, a magician, who had a lot of new tricks that caught the fancy of the crowd.

Austin & Stone's.

The new program at Austin & Stone's Museum yesterday was made up of novelties and a lively vaudeville show in the theatre.

King Philip Trips.

There is always cool weather on the trips of the steamer King Philip to the fishing grounds; good catches are reported daily.

Satelite Trips.

The trips of the steamer Satelite to the fishing grounds offer an excellent opportunity to escape the heat of the city.

Next Week's Plays.

"My Friend From India" will be the attraction at the Castle Square Theatre next week.

The next offering at the Majestic Theatre will be "The Boys of Company B."

Orpheum Theatre.

The new bill at the Orpheum Theatre yesterday proved popular from the start. It was made up of Henry and Lizel, in acrobatic singing and dancing; Mildred Flora, a fascinating comedienne; the McGinnis Brothers, in a dancing skit, and a half dozen other features. The picture display was new.

Colonial Line.

The passenger service of the Colonial Line between New England and New York is now recognized as one of the most popular routes between these two great centers. The big steel steamers which form the fleet of the Colonial Navigation Company are equipped with every modern appliance which insures safety and comfort of passengers.

Providence Trolleys.

The special trolley service provided by the Boston & Northern Street Railway between Boston and Providence or Fall River, connecting at those points for the night boats to New York is a most delightful way to travel during the heated Summer season.

UNITED STATES IN MOROCCAN MUDDLE

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The United States has taken a hand in the international muddle caused by Germany's threat of aggressive action in Morocco. According to semi-official information to-day, this country has allied herself with England and France to prevent the location of a German naval station on Moroccan soil. It is said that the department has already made strong representations to Germany on the subject.

NO. 4 LAUGHS AT GOODWIN

PARIS, July 11.—"Nat Goodwin is a fool to try to break the agreement we entered into before our marriage. This trust fund is the only thing that will save him from dying penniless," declared Edna Goodrich, wife No. 4, who is here with her mother, in commenting on the summons and complaint with regard to an action brought in the Superior Court at Los Angeles, against herself and Thomas H. Dudley, trustee, to annul the famous Goodrich-Goodwin ante-nuptial agreement of 1908.

The American correspondent saw Miss Goodrich at the Hotel Chatham. She was preparing for a trip to the country.

"His half of the income will assure him enough to live on for life. If he had control of the fund it would soon dwindle." She continued: "This suit doesn't disturb us in the least, but it would be worth a fortune just to see Nat undergoing cross-examination at the hands of Henry Ach of San Francisco, into whose hands I have entrusted my case.

"Mr. Ach tells me that service by registered mail—the way I was served—is not legal. But I would be willing to cross the ocean just to see Nat on the witness stand when Mr. Ach questions him."

The property involved in the trust fund is estimated at $300,000. The agreement was made when Goodwin still was married to Maxine Elliott.

GIBES OF EX-WIVES DRIVE GOODWIN TO REFUGE ON RANCH

LOS ANGELES, July 11.—"I'm sick and tired of it all, and soon I'm going out into the real man's country—out on the ranch and among the hills—to get away from this sickening notoriety. I loathe to talk about myself and my former wives. I just won't have it," exclaimed Nat Goodwin to-day.

He had just read a dispatch from London which quoted Maxine Elliott, his wife No. 3, and Edna Goodrich, wife No. 4, as calling him a joke and a funny fellow.

"I don't think Maxine would say that about me," he declared, as he stood barefooted in a suit of pink pajamas in the Oriental room of his beautiful rose-bowered home at Ocean Park. Looking over his glasses he said: "Maxine is too much of a lady to use any such expressions as are attributed to her. As for the other one—Edna—it does not matter."

Goodwin has found so much gratification in writing his book that he believes that his forte is literature.

Goodwin's time is divided between calisthenics to reduce his weight, and writing. In the rear of his home is a gymnasium. He arises about 9 o'clock and takes a dip in the surf. He writes until 4 p. m., then goes to the gymnasium, usually with guests. Whether they be men or women, he has them join him in wrestling, boxing, bag punching and other exercises. The last few days he has been taking exercise with a mysterious beautiful blonde. Her name has been guarded, Nat fearing the inevitable report that she would be No. 5.

FORMER BAY STATE SOLON ACCUSED OF ROBBING THE BLIND

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11.—John Risteen, seventy years old, and, according to his statement, once a member of the Massachusetts Legislature, was arrested by postal inspectors, charged with robbing two blind beggars. Risteen was employed to take them back and forth from their homes to their corners down-town. The specific offence is the opening of a registered letter containing $25, sent to the blind men by relatives in the East.

MRS. JENKINS'S SISTER WITNESS

NEW YORK, July 11.—Mrs. Marthe Fulds of New Orleans appeared as a witness before the Federal Grand Jury and gave testimony that corroborates the remarkable story told by Mrs. Helen Dwelle Jenkins of how jewels worth more than $300,000 were smuggled into this country through the instrumentality of two millionaires, the indictment of whom is expected this week. Mrs. Fulds is a sister of Mrs. Jenkins.

Mrs. Fulds was able to testify that the jewels purchased abroad by Nathan Allen of Kenosha, Wis., and given to Mrs. Jenkins in Paris, were actually brought to this country. Until her testimony went into the record the lack of corroborative evidence on this point was the one weak spot in the case.

The Government detectives, through the aid of Mrs. Jenkins, had no difficulty in tracing the purchase of the precious jems in foreign countries, but as most of the pearls and diamonds had been disposed of by their fair owner it was difficult to make the charge of smuggling sufficiently complete to guarantee conviction.

Testimony is Brief.

Mrs. Fulds was in the Grand Jury room only a few minutes, but it is believed that while there she told that in July, 1909, shortly after the return of Nathan Allen and Mrs. Jenkins from abroad, Mrs. Fulds accompanied the couple to the office of a banker on lower Broadway and was shown a costly pearl necklace. This, with several other pieces, furnished the most valuable part of the fortune in jewels given to Mrs. Jenkins by her wealthy admirer. It is known Mrs. Fulds was expected to give testimony concerning the visit to the banker's business establishment, as she had previously told the government investigators that she had actually been permitted to handle the pearls.

Mrs. Fulds is typical of the women of the South in manner and accent, and, like the romantic Mrs. Jenkins, is petite and good looking. Mrs. Fulds said:

Believes Sister Innocent.

"This affair is most disagreeable, not only to me, but to all members of our family. The one thing we wished to avoid was publicity. I have been promised by the authorities every protection possible, and I suppose they have done their best. I have no statement to make to the public.

"The affairs of Mrs. Jenkins, my sister, are her own. We are sorry for her and have always been willing to do anything for her that we could. I agreed readily to come here and testify, because I believe she was innocent of any intention to be a party to defrauding the government. But I cannot talk about her."

Mrs. Jenkins has almost entirely recovered from the temporary illness caused by her ordeal before the Grand Jury on an excessively hot day last week. She is expected to resume her testimony either to-day or to-morrow.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JULY 11, 1911

The Governor's Achievement--The Elevated, Tunnel and Consolidation Bill at Last Made Acceptable.

The closing hours of the present legislative session will mark the passage of a bill fixing for many years the relations of the West End Street Railway with the Boston Elevated Railway and the relations of the Boston Elevated Railway to the subway system.

The measure submitted yesterday represents the settlement of at least two years of bitter controversy between the representatives of the West End stockholders and the Boston Elevated and the public.

Measured at least by the DEMANDS of the two railway corporations, the public has issued VICTORIOUS from the contest. Whether the Boston Elevated and the West End have demanded more than they expected to get and, for that reason, the public victory is not so great as it seems, cannot be known and is not important.

If the public has conceded to excessive demands only what it would have conceded to moderate demands and has effectually protected the interests of both State and city, it has issued from the contest victorious even if the fight were more noisy than severe.

The AMERICAN believes that the bill now in the course of passage grants to the Boston Elevated and to the stockholders of the West End all that the public ought to grant and no more; and all that the public would have granted if the demands of these two corporations had been a hundred times greater than they were.

When the prolonged storm clears, the pilot always boxes his compass and takes the soundings to learn where he is and whither the ship has been driven. A brief review of the controversy will give AMERICAN readers an idea of how much has been accomplished by a TRUE GOVERNOR, the Public Franchise League, the Boston AMERICAN, the Boston Post and the frankness and reasonable conduct of Mr. Robert Winsor, the presiding genius of the Boston Elevated.

Two years ago the stockholders of the West End Street Railway refused to assent to a consolidation with the Boston Elevated Railway unless it was agreed in advance that the common stock of the West End should receive a guaranteed dividend of eight per cent. This meant a GIFT WITHOUT CONSIDERATION OF THREE MILLION DOLLARS from the pockets of the people who ride on the cars.

The Boston Elevated declared that it was willing to pay this increased dividend, upon the ground that the increased economies in the operation of their railway system, when the two corporations were consolidated, would more than make up the increased expense for dividends.

A joint board comprising the Railroad Commissioners and the Rapid Transit Commissioners rendered a report favorable to granting this three million dollar gift to the West End Street Railway stockholders, and for a fifty-year lease of the subways.

Immediately upon the appearance of this report, it became apparent to the AMERICAN that the ways were "being greased" for a bill bearing this West End gratuity. Thereupon, the AMERICAN opened fire upon the proposal.

It was clear that consolidation ought to be effected if it could produce economies in the operation of the two railroads. But those economies ought to go to an improvement of the service and not as an unearned gift to stockholders who have already admitted that they are receiving a GREAT SUFFICIENCY of dividends.

The Street Railway Committee soon reported a bill abandoning the consolidation for another lease and compromising the West End's demand for an eight per cent. dividend to seven and one-half per cent. dividend, but carrying also the suggestion of the joint board that the Elevated be given the control of the subways for a period of at least FORTY-TWO YEARS.

The AMERICAN also opposed this bill, because it abandoned the advantages of a consolidation, because conditions do not warrant even seven and one-half per cent. for the West End stockholders and because a lease of nearly fifty years was altogether UNTHINKABLE. At this point, the Boston Post joined the AMERICAN most effectively and the Transcript followed soon after.

The Governor, whose eye had been upon the situation from the beginning, took hold, and with the assistance of the Public Franchise League and particularly of Mr. Brandeis, worked out the present bill, which provides that the two corporations shall consolidate at the end of the present lease, and that no more than the accepted length of leases for the subways be given to the Elevated and that the West End Street Railway stockholders should receive no increase in their dividends unless conditions eleven years hence, when the present lease expires, appear to warrant the increase in the minds of arbitrators to be apointed by the Supreme Court, upon the petition of ten per cent. of the West End stockholders.

Here is a bill which can scarcely be called a compromise, for it contains nearly all the public would have asked had there been no other parties to the controversy. It appears to conserve the public interests splendidly and to solve a perplexing controversy for many years to come.

Without a free press and a free Governor, it would be impossible to say what might have happened, and the people may now appreciate the importance of a Governor and a press that will stand guard over their interests.

The fairness of the provisions of this bill are so MANIFEST and the discussion has been so COMPLETE, that the Legislature will waste little time in making it a law.

The one great achievement of this legislation will be the lesson which the Boston Elevated may learn, that it can be treated fairly by treating the public fairly and that a lobby is not necessary to obtain meritorious laws.

The AMERICAN congratulates the Governor, the Public Franchise League, Mr. Brandeis, Mr. Winsor and Senator Tinkham.

I AM TRYING TO GET TO TRENTON
TRENTON, N.J.? SURE I'LL HELP YOU GEORGE! JUST KEEP COOL I'LL GET YOU THROUGH THIS!
MUCH OBLIGED OLD PAL! YOU HAVE SAVED THE FLAG!
WELL I'M GLAD OF THAT IF IT ADDS TO YOUR GLORY GEORGE
DON'T CRY BABY DEAR WE'LL SOON BE SAFE!
HUH! WHO IS THAT? IS THAT ELIZA TRIPPING OVER THE ICE? I DO BELIEVE IT IS!
YES, IT WAS HER! BECAUSE HERE COME THE BLOOD HOUNDS AFTER HER! I HOPE THEY DON'T BOTHER ME!
HERE! GET AWAY! WAIT TILL I SEE SIMON LEGREE
OH! MY! I'M IN A JAM! I SHOULD HAVE KNOWN THIS MIGHT HAPPEN!
UM! I WAS ASLEEP! WHEO! IT IS HOT!
THE BOILER ROOM BOSS WANTS TO SEE YOU! HE'S IN THE HALL SHALL I TELL HIM TO COME IN?

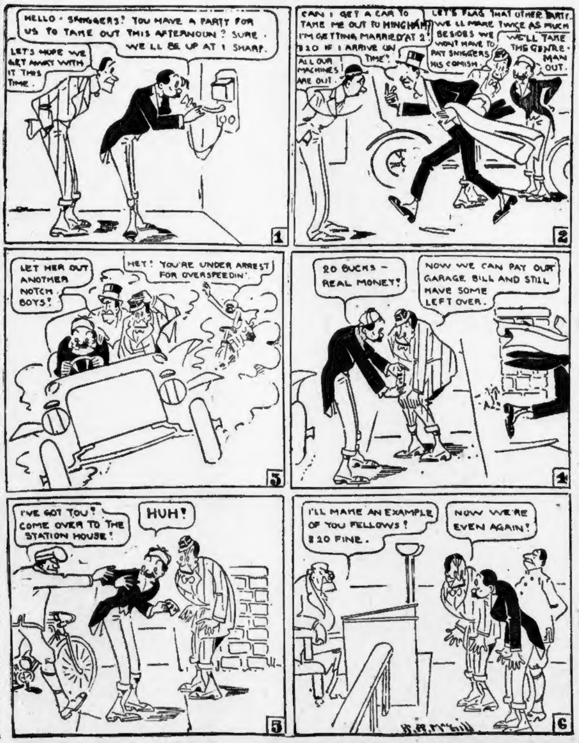
They Make Twenty Dollars---and Then Lose It



HELLO - SNIGGERS? YOU HAVE A PARTY FOR US TO TAKE OUT THIS AFTERNOON? SURE. WE'LL BE UP AT 1 SHARP.
LET'S HOPE WE GET AWAY WITH IT THIS TIME.
1
CAN I GET A CAR TO TAKE ME OUT TO HINGHAM? I'M GETTING MARRIED AT 2. $20 IF I ARRIVE ON TIME.
ALL OUR MACHINES ARE OUT.
LET'S FLAG THAT OTHER PARTY. WE'LL MAKE TWICE AS MUCH BESIDES WE WON'T HAVE TO PAY SNIGGERS HIS COMISH.
WE'LL TAKE THE GENTREMAN OUT.
2
LET HER OUT ANOTHER NOTCH BOYS!
HEY! YOU'RE UNDER ARREST FOR OVERSPEEDIN'.
3
20 BUCKS - REAL MONEY!
NOW WE CAN PAY OUR GARAGE BILL AND STILL HAVE SOME LEFT OVER.
4
I'VE GOT YOU! COME OVER TO THE STATION HOUSE!
HUH!
5
I'LL MAKE AN EXAMPLE OF YOU FELLOWS! $20 FINE.
NOW WE'RE EVEN AGAIN!

WHAT THE GEYSERS OF THE YELLOWSTONE TEACH

As a rule Nature works so uniformly one has little suspicion of the tremendous energies that are locked up in her, or of the surprising effects of which she is capable.

She is unlike the majority of people in this respect, that while they are fond of giving outward evidence of whatever powers they possess, she seems disposed rather to keep things to herself, and, in her action, to proceed in a way that calls little attention to what she is doing.

Once in a while, however, and in exceptional places, she acts more as people act, and shows a disposition that looks as though she were trying to show what she could do or, at any rate, to make such a startling output of energy as will suggest how vast are the resources which are at her disposal whenever she is in a mood to draw upon them.

Here, in the Yellowstone Park, we are just now in the midst of just such a startling demonstration—what we might call a freakish demonstration. From our hotel are visible something like twenty geysers that are in a more of less active state of ebullition.

Nature's Color Display in the Yellowstone

The first appearance is that the ground is everywhere underlaid with smouldering fires. Steam is constantly issuing from fissures, varying in width from a couple of inches to a dozen or twenty feet, filled usually with boiling water, through which bubbles of gas are constantly rising from mysterious depths.

The air is everywhere laden with the odor of sulphur. The real geyser displays, however, occur only at intervals varying in length from an hour to an entire day, or even weeks.

In the immediate vicinity of our hotel is a geyser which plays every seventy minutes, sending up a stream of boiling water and steam to a height varying from seventy to one hundred feet. There are two others within thirty minutes' walk which send up a similar column to about the same height, but whose discharge recurs at an interval of six hours and a half.

So regular are the periods of eruption that visitors can almost set their watches by them and gather at the spot at the predestined time and are never disappointed.

Still a fourth, called the Giantess, gave a magnificent display last evening, but the periods during which she remains quiescent are of unequal duration, and the last previous demonstration which she made was ten days ago.

The Vastness of the Subterranean Energy

There are at least a hundred fissures in the formations in the immediate vicinity of the hotel which assume the greatest variety of shapes. One takes the form of a butterfly, another of a lion, a giant, a massive drinking cup, a sponge, etc.

Those that are filled with boiling water are usually edged with a fringe of a delicate rocky tracing of every color—white, brown, gray, crimson, black or yellow—formed and colored presumably by the action exerted by some chemical ingredient of the subterranean discharge upon the basic substance of the surrounding soil or rock.

The column of water sent up by a spouting geyser is of magical beauty. It not only betrays the vastness of the subterranean energy which produces it, but is marked by that same grace of form and delicacy of texture that distinguish all of nature's handiwork.

The tremendous bulk of water thrown up as soon as it is thrust out of its crater begins to dissolve itself into forms of mist of the transparent delicacy of a bridal veil, which, when seen against the sun, or (in the evening) illuminated by a searchlight, blossoms into prismatic hues of unspeakable loveliness.

Such phenomena as those just described are not only most interesting and fascinating, but are at the same time sobering, for they set one thinking upon the gigantic forces that are at work in the world—forces that ordinarily play themselves out with such steady quietness as to escape the discovery or even the suspicion of any but the most considerate and observant.

We so rarely hear the whirr of the world's terrific machinery that we cease to remember the invisible energies by which it is operated. We are unaffected by the tremendous service rendered to us by the sun, because it does its work with so noiseless a constancy.

It takes the suddenness of the lightning and the crash of the thunder to startle us out of our regardlessness and to give us a feeling of what lies back of the ordinary gentle tenor of Nature's ways.

What it means for the earth to revolve daily on its axis and to go rushing through space does not occur to us, and only something like the shake-up of San Francisco or Lisbon, or the belchings of Vesuvius or Aetna, is sufficient to tumble us out of the laxiness of our thinking and give to us some realization of the powers that operate in this big world of ours that bears usually an aspect of such gracious sedateness.

Ordinary Customer Helps Pay Bill of Tardy Millionaire

Colonel Green, the son of an affluent mother, complains that of all his tenants the one who is slowest in paying his rent is a multi-millionaire. The case is not an exceptional one, as any one can learn by consulting his own grocer or butcher. Dealers do not like to lose their wealthy customers. Such customers, quite frequently, take advantage of that fact and let their accounts run, while patrons with less means are obliged to pay promptly or open an account elsewhere.

The result of it is that the man with the larger money is able to save the interest on his bill, which means that the dealer is "out" to that extent, and to compensate for losses so accruing a price is put upon his goods sufficient to cover poor payers and non-payers. The consequence of all which is that customers with ordinary means who pay promptly not only pay for their own groceries, meat and fish, but also help the tardy millionaire to pay for his. That is only one of many ways in which the dollar wins out as against the dime.

Finite and Infinite

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

In sending telegraphic messages by means of the wireless process, electricity surges to and fro in the transmitter at the rate of 400,000 oscillations per second. Now, our minds as at present constituted, or, perhaps more nearly correct to say, evoluted, are unable to think of this rapidity of oscillation; yet the rate is finite.

To a mind of infinite power the 1-400,000th part of a second is finite, and to a finite mind this rate is infinite. We see a bright spark of electric light when the transmitting key is pressed down and hear one short report. But as much as thirty oscillations, fifteen each way, occur during the 1-400,000th of the second of time. This surging is due to the oscillatory discharge of the condenser, comparable to Leyden jars, or, in many cases in practice, these jars themselves. Then a long interval comparatively, the one-fiftieth part of a second, ensues, during which the battery of jars or plates of a condenser are occupied in condensing another charge or quantity of electricity.

But we are unable to think of the one-fiftieth of one second. With the thirty swings to and fro, like an excessively rapid pendulum, electric and magnetic waves at the same rate form and vanish in space around the long wires stretched upon high poles or towers above. The magnetic waves form as circles around the antennae or vertical wires, while the electric form as loops in the plane of the wire, cutting the circular ethereal waves.

All this may hapepn in America. In Europe similar antennae are placed high in air to cut out, intercept or appropriate the space waves from America. The rate of transmission across the Atlantic is that of light—186,380 miles per second.

We can think of the giant suns, Vega and Sirius, within the one-hundredth part of a second. But they are known to be 206 trillion miles apart. But we can also think of the huge suns, Polaris and Canopus, during an equally short time. The distance from one to the other is unknown, but it is not less than eight quadrillion miles. What is 206 trillion miles distance compared to this?

A most wonderful metological fact is involved. Mind now expressing in human brain filaments can think almost instantaneously of two suns whose distance apart is immeasureable, and then require the same length of time to think of two objects only one inch apart.

What thought is has not been discovered, but the question arises, Does it traverse space from star to star whose distances range from 25 trillion up to 4,000 trillion miles in the same time? Or are the words, the names of the stars, absolutely adjacent to each other in brain fibre or cells? At all events, the most rapid minds so far tested in mentological laboratories cannot think of two objects in less than one-hundredth part of a second. Others run down so low as the one-tenth of a second.

A fly, a common house fly, can think and act in escaping a descending hand in less than the one-hundredth part of a second. Thus the insect surpasses man in this respect. A study of modern high mathematics will almost convince one that the phase or type of mind called human is actually infinite. Thus, let one not a mathematician try to think the thoughts of a great mathematician; he will soon desist and give up the task as one that is infinite.
